DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Finks-Harvey Plantation faces south from its location atop a small hillcrest along Route T, about four miles west of the small town of Roanoke, Missouri. A two-story, five bay brick structure, it is designed in local version of the Italianate style. Decorative features in the Italianate mode include a bracketed cornice, projecting bays, quoins, and segmental-arched windows. The central porch of the primary facade, once in keeping with the Italianate style, has since been modified, and an original, two-story side porch has been enclosed, but the house retains the overall integrity of its original construction ca. 1873-1876.

EXTERIOR

Shaped in the plan of an ell, the house measures approximately 48' in width by 58' in depth (excluding a lean-to addition). It consists of two stories, a full, unfinished attic, and a 17' by 14' cellar under the kitchen. A one-story section, nestled in the inner northwest corner, creates a slight variation in the ell shape. Originally, further spatial interest was present in a two-story loggia which extended along the western elevation of the ell. This area was enclosed sometime in the 1890's. In 1908 the structure was further modified by the addition of a one-story, frame lean-to (measuring 29' in width by 8' in depth) on the northernmost end of the ell.

The foundation and exterior walls of the building are constructed of red brick laid three thick in common bond. In 1977 the brick was sandblasted, tuckpointed, and covered with a protective silicone coating. The lean-to and the enclosed loggia are covered with asbestos shingles over wood siding, and the shingles are painted red to approximate the color of the adjacent brick. Quoins, windowheads, and porch columns are of brick painted white, while cornices and bay windows are of wood painted white. The low hip roof is covered with standing-seam, galvanized tin and tar. Three brick chimneys are contained within the fabric, projecting through the slopes of the roof. The chimneys taper slightly from a wide base and have decorative brickwork on the upper ends. In 1977 two of the chimneys were encased with cement for support.

Windows of the Finks-Harvey Plantation are narrow, rectangular, double-hung sash. Those of the brick structure are surmounted by segmental brick arches with radiating voussoirs. Windows on the second story above the bay windows are paired beneath segmental brick arches. A segmental-arched transom with stained glass occurs over a double-leaf, panelled walnut door at the main entrance centered on the primary facade.

The roofline is accented with an abbreviated entablature of frieze and boxed cornice with brackets. Double brackets support the cornice, and panels with ornate attic vents decorate the spaces between the brackets. Similar cornices with slightly different brackets trim the three-sided bay windows which enliven the east and west facades (two on the east and one on the west). A one-story porch spans the central three bays of the primary elevation. The original Italianate porch columns were replaced in 1908 with square brick piers. The four piers and two pilasters have corners of curved, molded brick. Although the original bracketed cornice was retained in the modification of the porch, a crowning balustrade was removed. Balustrades atop the bay windows were also removed at some point, as were louvered window shutters.

INTERIOR

The interior of the Finks-Harvey Plantation retains a substantial degree of original integrity. Dominating the central hallway is a curved walnut staircase with newel post of tapering octagonal design. Original oak and walnut woodwork and doors are retained throughout, although much has been painted. The woodwork is of simple design, with architrave trim around windows and doors and recessed rectangular panels on door reveals and woodwork below the bay windows. A panelled dado with chair rail, presently painted white, is retained in the dining room. The wood flooring of oak and pine is retained throughout but is presently covered with contemporary carpeting. Five fireplaces remain; one of these, with an elaborate mantel imported from Belgium, was added ca. 1903.

SITE

The Finks-Harvey Plantation is situated in the midst of a rural landscape of gently rolling hills in northern Howard County, Missouri. Located about 145' back from Route T, the house is shaded by trees and surrounded by fields. The only other building remaining on the nominated property is a two-car garage, located to the west of the house. A frame, weatherboarded structure, it probably dates to the period between 1903 and 1948. As it is not associated with the period of primary significance of the Finks-Harvey Plantation and is not of architectural merit, it is of secondary importance and may be considered an intrusion within the nominated property.

CONDITION AND STATUS

The Finks-Harvey Plantation remains in good condition. Certain repairs are needed, such as replastering, papering, and painting of the interior. The second floor of the enclosed side porch is unfinished and is being converted into a second bath. The present owners, Bert W. and Doris E. Hudson, are very enthusiastic about the property and are proceeding with needed repairs and restoration.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Finks-Harvey Plantation, Roanoke, Missouri, is an important, well-preserved example of the Italianate style of architecture, remarkable for its existence and survival in the rural environs of northern Howard County. Historically, the house is associated with prominent figures in the settlement and history of Howard County, notably Major Joseph Hughes Finks. Finks, a native Virginian and descendent of a Revolutionary War veteran, was himself a distinguished veteran of the Confederacy and a widely respected individual in Howard County.

Joseph Hughes Finks was born on August 7, 1838, near Stanardsville, Greene County, Virginia, to Captain James and Caroline (Hughes) Finks.² At the age of thirteen, he moved with his parents to Howard County, Missouri. He is said to have returned to Virginia around 1859 in order to pursue his education at Randolph Macon College.³ Upon returning to Missouri, he engaged in farming, continuing the family tradition. When the first call came for soldiers for the Confederacy in 1861, he enlisted under Governor Jackson's Missouri Volunteers for the Confederacy. He was soon commissioned lieutenant-colonel by the Governor and assigned to a position on the staff of General John B. Clark, Sr. In 1862 he entered the regular Confederate Army and was commissioned Major by Jefferson Davis. During the course of the War Between the States he served on the staffs of Generals D.M. Frost, John B. Clark, Sr., John B. Clark, Jr., Drayton, and M.M. Parsons. At the time of the surrender of the Confederate forces to the Union in 1865, he was with General M.M. Parsons in Shreveport, Louisiana.⁴

Returning home to Howard County, he resumed his farming activities. In 1870, he was elected Clerk of the Circuit Court and Recorder of Howard County. In 1873 he married Lizzie (Mary) Harvey, daughter of William J. and Ellen M. Harvey of adjacent Chariton County.⁵ Mr. Harvey, a prosperous farmer, had acquired land in Howard County through a sheriff's sale in 1871.⁶ Lizzie Harvey Finks inherited this land after her marriage, and soon thereafter she and Major Finks built their home, the Italianate brick structure which remains today.

In 1874 Finks was reelected as Clerk of the Circuit Court, and in 1878 he was elected to the Missouri legislature.⁸ He continued to farm on their property until 1884, when he sold the land to Robert G. Tribble.⁹ In 1885 he was elected Marshall of the Missouri Supreme Court, a position he held until his death on April 24, 1915. Tribble who acquired the Finks Plantation in 1884, had come to Missouri from Kentucky. He retained the 200 acre farm until 1903, when it was sold to Berry Hudson.¹⁰

Born in Chariton County in 1854, Hudson was the son of Jesse B. and Elizabeth Wiley Hudson, both former Kentuckians. His first wife having died, Hudson married Annie Taylor, of Shelby County, Missouri. Hudson pursued merchandising in Roanoke for the several years, but eventually took up the vocation of farming. At this point he acquired the former Finks home, which he named Woodland Park. Hudson established a profitable grain farm and a substantial cattle-raising operation.¹¹

In 1946 ownership of the property was transferred to Mr. and Mrs. W.E. Batterton.¹² The Battertons modernized the structure, installing plumbing, electrical wiring and gas heating.¹³ Mrs. Batterton, who used a rosy shade of pink lavishly in her decoration, christened the home "Roseland."

On March 1, 1966, Orville Gebhardt received ownership of the property,¹⁴ and in 1968 3.86 acres of the Gebhardt property, which included the Finks-Harvey Plantation, became the property of Mr. and Mrs. Bert W. Hudson. A retired Major in the United States Air Force, Hudson served in the military for over 20 years. The Hudsons, who have six children, have lived in a wide variety of locales, including South Carolina, Texas, California, Wyoming and Okinawa. Major Hudson completed a tour of duty in Vietnam shortly after the purchase of the Finks-Harvey Plantation and was awarded the Vietnamese Medal of Honor. He is presently employed as a psychologist in Salisbury.¹⁵

The survey of Missouri's historic sites is based on the selection of sites as they relate to theme studies outlined in "Missouri's State Historic Preservation Plan." Therefore, the Finks-Harvey Plantation is being nominated to the National Register of Historic Places as an example of the themes of "Architecture," and "Society."

1. His great-grandfather, Mark Finks, emigrated from Switzerland. Settling in Madison County, Virginia, he eventually served under General Lafayette during the Revolutionary War. See Walter Williams, ed., A History of Northeast Missouri, vol. III (Chicago: The Lewis Publishing Company, 1913), p. 1946.
2. Captain James Finks met Caroline Hughes while on a trip in Howard County, Missouri. They married and returned to Virginia, where they resided until 1859. See History of Howard and Cooper Counties, Missouri (St. Louis: National Historical Company, 1883), p. 574.
3. Although most sources mention his education at Randolph Macon, the college has no official record of his enrollment.
