DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Ray County Court House sits in the center of the square in Richmond's business district. The square is slightly above grade. The three-story stone structure fronts on four streets. It has a frontage of eighty feet on College Street on the west and Thornton Street on the east. It has a frontage of one hundred feet on North Main Street on the north and Main Street on the south. The Neo-Classical building occupies 9,000 square feet of ground area.<sup>1</sup> It is surrounded by landscaped lawns on all four sides.

Construction materials and colors

The building is constructed of Bedford limestone. Metal framed windows and doors are used throughout the structure. A full basement runs under the building. The roof, supported by steel roof trusses, is covered with terra cotta tile.<sup>2</sup> A chimney is located at the northwest corner of the building.

East and west facades

The east and west facades are identical. A ground story level, of rusticated ashlar finish, features a projecting bay. Double entrance doors are recessed in this bay behind large piers on which the paired colossal columns supporting the pediment rest. An ornamental light fixture is attached to each pier. Bays 2 and 4 are recessed slightly, and bays 1 and 5 are recessed even further. On the second and third floors, of dressed stone, the central bay features paired Ionic columns supporting a plain pediment. A clock face is located in the center of each pediment. The entablature contains the inscription "Obedience to Law is Liberty." Paired windows are located between the Ionic columns on both the second and third floors. A balustraded rail forms a balcony area on the second floor between the columns. Bays 2 and 4, slightly set back, contain a window on each level. Bays 1 and 5, recessed further, also contain a window on each level, recessed slightly behind colossal pilasters. The entablature above bays 1, 2, 4, and 5 is unadorned. A balustraded roof line is featured above bays 1 and 5, while a parapet roof is located above bays 2, 3, and 4.

North and south facades

The features of the north and south facades are identical to the east and west facades with one exception. The north and south facades are seven bays in width instead of five, with an additional window at the end of each facade, enframed by pilasters.

Interior

The four entrances to the building, from each facade, lead to a spacious central lobby on the first floor. An atrium over the lobby area opens the area between the first and second floors. Stairs flanking the north entrance lead to the upper floors. The interior features tile floors and marble wainscotting. The second floor consists of office space ringing the atrium. The third floor is devoted to the Circuit Court Room.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The site of the Ray County Court House has a long history as the civic center of the county and the city of Richmond. The court house of 1850 was located at the same spot. The present court house, constructed in 1914/1915 is typical of court house design of its era and at the time of its construction was the largest construction project undertaken in Ray County.

History of Ray County Government

Ray County is almost as old as the state of Missouri. Originally Ray County encompassed what has since been divided into eight counties. It was organized as a separate county from territory taken from Howard County by an act of the Missouri legislature, effective on January 1, 1821. The county was named for John Ray, a delegate from Howard County to the state constitutional convention held in St. Louis.<sup>1</sup> The first temporary seat of justice for Ray County was in Bluffton, where the first session of the county court convened on January 1, 1821. At one of its first sessions, the court named a commission to determine a location for a permanent county seat at a more central point in the county. Six years later, in October 1827, the commissioners approved a plat of the farms of John Wollard, William B. Martin, Isaac Thornton, and William Thornton as a site for a county seat. The site was divided into 100 lots which were sold to the public on October 25, 1827. The new county seat was called Richmond, named after the capital of Virginia, from where many of the early settlers came. The first court house erected for the county was a log structure, built in 1829. In 1850 it was replaced by a more impressive brick and stone court house costing $50,000.<sup>2</sup>

During the period 1904-1910 approximately ten Missouri counties authorized the construction of new court houses replacing small, inexpensive and often inadequate structures with magnificent and costly buildings.<sup>3</sup> The court house served symbolically to represent the quality of the county and there was undoubtedly some sense of competition in the building of these structures. In 1901 the Richmond Conservator, commenting on the new Carroll County Court House, noted that Ray County was out of debt and in need of a new court house also, "...but when we do build, we should make it a $75,000 structure."<sup>4</sup>

On December 6, 1913, the county approved by a large majority a bond issue for the construction of a new court house.<sup>5</sup> In January, 1914, the county court studied the various plans submitted for the structure and narrowed the field to five competitors - Eckel and Aldrich of St. Joseph; Rea and Lovitt of Kansas City, Missouri; Rose and Peterson of Kansas City, Kansas; Sameman and Goold of Kansas City, Missouri; and R. Warren Roberts of

Alterations

The building has been spared major alterations. The metal framed windows and doors are recent replacements.

Condition

The building appears to be in excellent condition on both the exterior and interior.

Site

Commercial structures are located to the east, west, north, and south. The Court House sits above grade, surrounded by landscaped lawns. A monument to General Alexander W. Doniphan sits on the west lawn and a monument to World War veterans sits on the east lawn.

Present Status

The building is still in use as the Ray County Court House.

Chillicothe. Roberts was the eventual winner of the competition.<sup>6</sup> Mr. Renne, a Kansas City contractor and specialist in moving buildings was hired to move the old court house and recorder's office. Moving the court house was the largest building moved in Richmond up to that time.<sup>7</sup> It was relocated on a lot on South College Street where it served many more useful years as the headquarters for the Coal Miners Union. Later it was converted into apartments and was eventually demolished in the 1960's.<sup>8</sup>

An indication of the civic pride evoked by the new court house is evident in two gala events associated with the new building. The cornerstone dedication was held September 19, 1914. The Mason's were in charge of the ceremony with Grand Master Van F. Boor presiding. Other lodges and labor organizations were also participants. A parade preceded the formal ceremonies. Following the parade, Richmond Mayor Clarence H. Hubbell made a short speech on behalf of the city. Prosecuting Attorney Albert M. Clark then spoke, recounting the history of the previous court houses. The main orator of the day was Dr. C. H. Briggs of Sedalia, who spoke about the history of the Masonic fraternity as a workingman's guild. The ladies of the Eastern Star then served a dinner at the Elk's Club rooms, with music furnished by local musicians. The cornerstone is a massive block of Missouri granite quarried in Iron County and weighing almost 4,000 pounds. A number of papers and documents dealing with the Masonic orders, Ray County history, and Richmond church history were placed in a copper box and deposited in the cornerstone.<sup>9</sup>

Construction of the building began in earnest after the cornerstone ceremonies. It was the largest building project undertaken by the county and required 11,000 box car loads of material.<sup>10</sup> By October, 1914, the first tier of stone was in place. A large derrick, over seventy feet high was erected in the center of the structure to raise the stones (some weighing over 10 tons) in place. After its use, the derrick was sawed into sections and removed from the building.<sup>11</sup>

In October, 1914, the Richmond Conservator began lobbying for a clock for the court house, an item that had been omitted from the plans. The county court finally came up with the necessary $800 for installation of a clock dial in each facade, run by electricity.<sup>12</sup>

The second event associated with the building was the dedication held on November 20, 1915. The ceremonies again began with a parade, featuring the Henrietta and Richmond bands. A number of business houses around the court house were decorated with flags and bunting. The completed court house was decorated with flowers at the windows, corners of the rooms, and hanging from the electric light fixtures. After the ceremonies the flowers were distributed to the sick and to the County Home. Numerous speakers held forth in the third floor Circuit Court room. Among the orators were Judge George Lavelock, Judge Thomas K. Kirkpatrick, Lieutenant Governor William Painter of Carrollton, and Senator James A. Reed of Kansas City. In the evening a dance was held on the first floor accompanied by orchestra music.<sup>13</sup>

Since its dedication, the court house has continually served as the governmental center of Ray County. In 1919, Judge Frank Devilbiss, who was a speaker at the dedication, was fatally stabbed in the Court House by Robert Lyon, editor of the Richmond Conservator. Claiming self defense, Lyon was acquitted in a sensational trial at the Court House.<sup>14</sup>

Warren Roberts

Warren Roberts, architect of the Ray County Court House, was born September 26, 1881. He graduated from the University of Missouri in 1910 - returning later to earn a Masters degree, assist in football coaching, and to teach in the Engineering School. He served on the Mexican border in 1916 and in France during the First World War. He died in an automobile accident in Chillicothe at the age of 69 in 1950. Roberts was the architect of several Chillicothe buildings including the City Hall, Court House, high school, and Christian Church.<sup>15</sup>

The survey of Missouri's historic sites is based on the selection of sites as they relate to theme studies in Missouri history as outlined in "Missouri's State Historic Preservation Plan." The Ray County Court House is, therefore, being nominated to the National Register of Historic Places as an example of the themes of "Architecture," "Political Affairs," and "Urban Design."
