DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Zephaniah Sappington House is located at 11145 Gravois Road, just west of Sumter Drive and about 1/4 mile south of the city limits of Crestwood, Missouri. It is a rectangular two-story weatherboarded log structure with a one-story south wing; the main elevation facing due east, is at a slightly acute angle to the road. A two-story, five-bay gallery extends across this front and continues as a one-story porch across the wing.

A rudimentary knowledge of classical proportions is evident in the simple column - like shapes of the wooden posts, the slightly irregular pattern of inter-columniation and the shorter scale of the second-floor posts. The first floor of the gallery is flagstone, while the second floor is wooden with a simple wooden balustrade. Behind the gallery the pattern of fenestration is irregular; doors are placed in the southernmost bay of the wing and the second bay from the north. Two large squared rubble chimneys mark the ends of the main block.

Inside the house is only one room deep, and circulation was originally primarily by the gallery, which before 1887 was matched by another on the west side of the house.¹ The exterior walls protected by these two galleries were originally plastered. This plaster survives behind the second floor of the remaining gallery. The south wing was built using materials from the old west gallery.

Two board-and-batten outbuildings survive on to the northeast of the house as well as a small log structure with a frame wing. The ground drops rapidly to the east of the house toward a small spring, the source of a branch of the Gravois Creek. According to tradition, this was the site of a mill built by Rezin Sappington, a brother of Zephaniah, and two millstones survive, incorporated into low garden walls.²

The present owner of the property was born in 1887. His property will revert to the owners of the surrounding apartment development on his death.³ An approved plat of this development on file with St. Louis County shows a street crossing the present site of the house. Thus, although the house and outbuildings are in good condition and a source of community pride, the continued existence of this important historic site is seriously threatened.

FOOTNOTES

1. Information provided by owner. The galleries may have been added to the house about 1830, according to William Bodley Lane.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT Zephaniah Sappington, Builder

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Zephaniah Sappington House is, with nearby "White Haven," one of two important two-story galleried pioneer houses in St. Louis County. It is also significant as one of a cluster of early houses in the Crestwood area that are connected by kinship.

Zephaniah Sappington was born about 1782 in Ohio County, Virginia (now West Virginia), the eldest son of John Sappington (1753-1815) and Jemima Fowler, who had been married February 1, 1781.¹ With his parents and sixteen younger siblings, he came to the Louisiana Territory in 1804 or shortly after. He married Margaret Parke, the sister of his own sister Margaret's husband, Jonah Parke. With other members of his family, he joined the militia at the outbreak of the War of 1812 and served briefly.² He probably built this house shortly after his father's death in 1815, on a grant of nearly two quarters of Section 20, Township 44 North, Range 6 East.³

By this time, his brother Thomas had built the brick house now at 1015 South Sappington Road; William Lindsay Long, the husband of his sister Elizabeth, had built "White Haven," now at 9050 Whitehaven Drive; and Joseph Sappington had built the log house at 10734 Clearwater Drive. These houses were joined in 1820 by William L. Long's second house at 9385 Pardee Road. All these buildings are on or have been nominated to the National Register of Historic Places.

In 1857 Zephaniah Sappington died, and on a map of about 1870, his property is shown divided among George and Perry, nephew Thomas J., and one Jemima Steinhauer.⁴ She may have been a daughter of Zephaniah and the wife of H.F. Steinhauer, who owned the property in 1878.⁵ The old house on her portion of the property was occupied by tenants, and when it was sold in 1887 to Henry Dressel, it required extensive repairs. Dressel was a son of Caspar Dressel, an immigrant from Bavaria who settled in south St. Louis in 1857.⁶

John M. Dressel, son of Henry, was less than one year old when his family moved into the Zephaniah Sappington House. He returned to the house at the time of his marriage in 1916 and remains there today. He played an important role in the development of the suburban school system, serving as clerk of the Sappington Board of Education from 1927 to 1949 and as chairman of the newly merged Lindbergh School District from 1949 to 1958.⁷
