DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Surrounded by flat, regular terrain, the Bethel Historic District in Bethel, Missouri is bisected by a main street (Route 15) which runs in a north-south direction, with two streets parallel to it, one to the east and one to the west. The town is further divided by a series of three cross streets running in an east-west direction parallel to the North River which lies just to the south of the town. The majority of the buildings are arranged along both sides of the main street with an east-west orientation. Only the Vandiver House which was standing when the property was purchased defies this directional placement.

Architecturally, the structures are remarkably consistent. The buildings are situated close to the sidewalks to utilize the minimum amount of farmland. They all stand on limestone foundations and most are constructed of brick made by the colony members and laid according to the American bond method. Broken bits of brick also appear in the frame houses as an insulating filler between the walls. Two story structures with simple ridge roofs are the most prevalent, as are plain rectangular doors and windows with wood frames, sills and lintels. The buildings are generally devoid of ornamentation with the exception of slight decorative brickwork above each opening.

The interiors are characterized by central halls and large open rooms, generally two to each floor, with predominantly walnut woodwork and floor boards.

The list of Bethel Society structures included within this historic district is as follows:

1. The Vandiver House, a two story brick structure purchased by the colonists in 1844 from Mr. Vandiver and used to house the first colonists during their initial winter in Bethel. This structure later held the Bethel hat and glove factories in its two upper rooms.
2. The Bair Residence, a two story frame house covered with clapboard; In colony times Mr. Bair was the Bethel wheelwright.
3. The Bethel School, a one story brick structure.
4. A two story brick residence.
5. The Henry Ziegler Residence, a two story brick house with hip roof.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Bethel Historic District has both historical and architectural significance. Historically, Bethel was an important manifestation of the mid-eighteenth century trend toward organizing communistic societies and further, was the most successful communistic society established in Missouri. Architecturally, the district is an extant example of communal society buildings, constructed from 1844-1880.

The founder of Bethel was Dr. William Keil, a Protestant German emigrant, who, believing in the moral value of communal living, gathered together a group of followers, mainly poor and working-class Germans, and purchased land for a commune in Shelby County, Missouri in 1844. (William G. Bek, "From Bethel, Missouri, to Aurora, Oregon, Letters of William Keil, 1855-1870," Missouri Historical Review, 48:23, October 1953, and William G. Bek, "A German Communistic Society in Missouri," Missouri Historical Review, 3:52-3, October 1908, and Charles Nordhoff, The Communistic Societies of the United States, 1875, reprint 1960, pp. 306-7.) (Shelby County Deed Record, Book P, p. 48.)

Settlement began in 1844, and by 1847 the town of Bethel was a thriving and prosperous village as described in a letter to the Hannibal Gazette of 1847.

On either side of the street leading up from the bridge, are the dwelling houses, situated at regular intervals, built of brick and nearly all of the same size. On the right ... a large hotel is in course of erection. About half a mile from the river (North River), a large church is being completed.

The writer also mentions such industries as a tannery, lumber mill, flour mill and a carding and spinning establishment. "The colony numbers about 600 souls and is in a prosperous condition, and on best terms with all their neighbors." (Hannibal Gazette, October 7, 1847, p.2, col. 3.)

BETHEL HISTORIC DISTRICT

By 1854, Kiel believed the Bethel area was becoming too populated and he decided to begin another communal colony in the new territory of Oregon. Between 1854 and 1863, about 400 of the 650 people in Bethel in 1855, migrated west to Oregon and founded the settlement of Aurora. This caused a serious drain on the population and resources of the Bethel community. (Charles Nordhoff, The Communistic Societies of the United States, 1875, reprint 1960, p. 327.)

By 1874-75, the Bethel community owned about 4,000 acres of land and 1300 acres in Adair County where a new settlement called Nineveh had been established in 1851. When Charles Nordhoff visited Bethel in 1874, the town had 200 members, and such buildings as a church, saw mill, grist mill, tannery, general store, drug store, shops for carpenters, blacksmiths, coopers, tinners, tailors, shoemakers, and hatters; as well as many fine brick homes. The town consisted of one main street running north and south; at the head of which was a hotel kept in the German way with beds in the large common room and meals in the kitchen. (Nordhoff, 1960, pp. 324-25.)

The government of both the Bethel and Aurora communities resided in the person of William Kiel. His powerful will, magnetic personality and autocratic leadership were the bonds unifying the two communities. (William G. Bek, "From Bethel, Missouri, To Aurora, Oregon, Letters of William Kiel, 1855-1870," Missouri Historical Review, 48: 25, October 1953.) His teachings became the basic tenets of the two societies.

1. The form of government should be parental like the parental nature of the government of God.
2. Societies should follow the model of the family; where all members work for the general welfare, share all interests and property in common and draw their livelihood from a common treasury.
3. Community applies only to property and labor as religion and the state of nature do not teach community in any other things. Marriage and family life is therefore retained.
4. To love one another is the basic truth of Christianity.

8. (#2)

BETHEL HISTORIC DISTRICT

The community members read few books except the Bible, shunned most religious ceremonies and preferred to rely on the advice of Kiel. (Charles Nordhoff, The Communistic Societies of the United States, 1875, reprint 1960, pp. 309-329.) The "chief aim of his preaching seems to have been to induce his followers to lead a moral life; to assert his authority; to compel the members to be industrious and thus foster the progress of the community." (William G. Bek, "A German Communistic Society in Missouri," Missouri Historical Review, 3: 69, October, 1908.)

Upon Kiel's death in 1877, the two colonies lost their unifying force and dissension soon developed. Since no strong leader appeared to manage and control the affairs of the colonies, and since many of the young people became dissatisfied with the communal way of life, it was decided to divide the property, first between the two colonies and then between the respective members of each colony. (Bek, "A German Communistic Society in Missouri," Missouri Historical Review, 3: 69, October, 1908.) Bethel dissolved as a community in 1880, followed by Aurora in 1881. (Ralph Albertson, "A Survey of Mutualistic Communities in America," The Iowa Journal of History and Politics, 34: 387, October, 1936.) However, many of the members remained on their parcels of land and Bethel was soon incorporated as a town in 1883.
