The determination of national register eligibility as a contributing to a historic district requires more research as part of a larger area including Main Street (Ten Mile Drive) and Forest Hill Ave. This was surveyed as part of a training exercise and included a single cul-de-sac with 16 houses. Possible areas of significance are architecture and community development/architecture.

This one and one-half story, three bay house with vinyl siding has a medium pitched side gable roof with asphalt shingles. From left to right, the first bay features a banded 9/9 window. The second has a door with sidelights and a portico with concrete stoop and metal shed roof hood. The third bay features two banded 9/9 windows that are the same as the first bay's.
