Kansas City, Missouri
INTRODUCTION
Burns & McDonnell Engineering Company, in collaboration with Ameren Missouri, the Federal Highway Administration, and the Missouri Department of Transportation, have been conducting a transportation study in Callaway County. An Environmental Assessment (EA) is being prepared in which a 500-foot wide corridor for two potential routes for a new roadway, including a Preferred Alternative and an alternate (Southern Alternative), are being evaluated for environmental impacts. The Preferred and Southern Alternatives are displayed on the attached topographic maps.

In accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) and Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act, architectural surveys of the structures along the two alternative routes were conducted. An initial architectural survey of the structures along the Preferred Alternative was conducted in January 2010. Following this survey, an alternate route (Southern Alternative) was proposed. Permission to access property was requested from landowners along both alternatives in order to conduct additional surveys. In May 2011, a more extensive survey was conducted to obtain more detailed photographs of existing structures along the Preferred and Southern Alternatives. In support of the photographic survey, documentary research was conducted online and in person at the Callaway County Historical Society and Callaway County Courthouse in January 2011.

HISTORIC DISCUSSION
Callaway County was organized in 1820; the first county seat was Elizabeth (now known as Ham’s Prairie). Ham’s Prairie was named after Rev. John Ham who arrived in Callaway County in 1816 and carved his name on a tree in the area. The first circuit court was held at the home and tavern of Henry Brite. Brite named the location Elizabeth after his wife. Elizabeth had a jail but not a courthouse. Brite’s tavern served as the courthouse until 1825 when the county seat was moved to Fulton. The relocation was based on the location of Fulton as a more central point within the county. The population of the county grew quickly over the next 20 years from 1,797 in 1821 to 11,765 in 1840. Many of the early settlers came from Virginia and Kentucky looking for cheap land to build farms and raise families. Many arrived as extended family units. Hunting and trapping were primary sources of food for early settlers. From 1834 through 1838 several waves of German immigration occurred, and a culture based on vineyards and wine production soon emerged. Numerous churches were established throughout the county during the settlement period with Baptist, Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, and Church of Christ all forming by the late 1820s.

The state insane asylum was built in Fulton in 1851, followed in the same year by construction of the State Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, and establishment of Westminster College in 1855. Mineral deposits including a vast coal field and clay sources were discovered about this same time. The erection of the three state institutions combined with the expanding mineral extraction industries brought not only prestige but attracted additional settlers to the area. The population continued to increase through the 1850s. Mineral sources in the county include brick clay, coal, iron ore, limestone, and sand and gravel quarries. Mineral wealth in the project area is largely confined to clay and coal mining with abandoned strip mines dotting the landscape.
The rivers and streams served as the first primary transportation routes with some reliance on old Indian and trapper trails; some of which became the basis for the first roads. The increased use of the trails led to more settlers and population growth. Public maintenance of the roads began in the early 1900s.

Although the general population increased, Callaway County remained primarily rural. During the Civil War, the state was divided between union loyalists and southern secessionists. In Callaway County, most residents were southern sympathizers. Because the county is situated between St. Louis and Jefferson City, it was home to numerous war related marches, skirmishes, and battles. The Callaway County Historical Society website shows two such sites located in the study area, including an area where Union Troops marched and a skirmish at Auxvasse. Because of its southern sympathies, the county residents were often fearful of undue imprisonment, death, and pillaging at the hands of Union soldiers.

Unlike the South, which suffered under reconstruction, the general economy of Callaway County grew after the Civil War, largely as a result of the railroad in the 1870s. Coal mining helped bring the railroad into the county for transport of material to the river. This in turn brought more settlers and more railroads, aiding in population growth. Railroad transport became cheaper, faster, more efficient, and more accessible than river travel.

The general population declined between 1900 and 1930 with many residents preferring to move to more urban areas leaving behind the hard life of farming for more lucrative avenues. Beyond Fulton the outlying areas of the county have remained largely agricultural. The quieter rural areas have become attractive residential locations for many who work in nearby Fulton and Jefferson City, with small, newer developments springing up throughout the county.

STRUCTURES SURVEY
Documentary research was conducted at the Callaway County Courthouse and Callaway County Historical Society in January 2011. This research was conducted to obtain information for assessing general age or historical context of properties included in the study area. Maps obtained from the Historical Society included Callaway County parcel maps from 1958, 1974, and 2006. Also available were geographical data on school, church, and cemetery locations. Other sources used for this study included the 1975 U.S. Geological Survey Guthrie quadrangle (1969, photorevised 1981), Fulton quadrangle (1975, photorevised 1985), and Reform quadrangle (1975, photorevised 1985), 2010 aerial photos, and the Callaway County Missouri 2006 Plat Book for parcel data.

This document presents photographs of all accessible structures along the Preferred and Southern Alternatives. The structures are grouped by property/parcel (i.e., a house, barn, and shed all on one property are presented together). Properties (e.g., Property 16) are generally numbered from west to east beginning with the western segment of the Preferred Alternative, followed by the western segment of the Southern Alternative, the central segment (same for Preferred and Southern Alternatives), the eastern segment of the Preferred Alternative, and ending with the eastern segment of the Southern Alternative. Only those properties containing structures are described below. The remaining properties are numbered on the aerial and quad maps, but are not discussed. The property boundaries and structures are identified on the aerial maps for reference. Structures are identified with both the property number and a lowercase letter. For example, if Property 16 contains a house, a shed, and a barn, the house would be identified as Structure 16a, the shed as Structure 16b, and the barn as Structure 16c. In some instances, two parcels are registered to the same owner or appear to go together. When this occurs, the parcel being discussed will have both numbers listed together with a / between them (e.g., Property 16/19).

ELIGIBILITY RECOMMENDATIONS

Following completion of the survey, the structures were reviewed by Cydney Millstein of Architectural & Historical Research, LLC. For the examination of the structures, it appears that the vast majority of the architectural resources located within the Area of Potential Effect (APE) consist of residences and outbuildings constructed within the last 30 years. Ranging from manufactured homes (i.e., Property 112) to modestly designed, one-story ranch-style residences and non-descript ancillary buildings (i.e., Property 55), these types of commonly found building types within the survey area do not appear to be eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP). While there are a few barns that represent a vanishing property type, their overall condition renders them non-eligible.

The following five properties appear to be eligible for listing in the NRHP and may warrant further examination:

- Property 17/18 - House and outbuildings
- Property 46/47 - 1-story Craftsman-style house
- Property 48 - Farm complex
- Property 40 - 1-1/2-story Craftsman-style house
- Property 152 - 2-story Gothic Revival house and outbuildings
WESTERN SEGMENT – PREFERRED ALTERNATIVE

Property 5

The 2006 parcel data does not include ownership information for this property. Property 5 consists of approximately three acres and appears to have two separate residences. The name and address on the mailbox of the first house is Bill Burnam, 1831 S. Business 54. The second residence is a duplex with the address 1903 A and B on the front. Both structures are represented on the 1975 quadrangle. Both are located inside the 500-foot wide corridor for the Preferred Alternative.

Recommendation – Property 5 is not eligible for listing in the NRHP.
Structure 5b (Duplex), view W
Property 9

This property is owned by Maurice Stack, address 1960 Lumberyard Road. The parcel consists of a house, a small metal shed, a wooden carport, a wooden shed, a duplex, a small metal shed near the duplex, a workshop, and a one car garage. According to Mrs. Stack they have lived in the house for 52 years. An old house in the northeast corner of the property has been removed. The duplex is rented out by the Stack family. The old house (removed), a garage formerly associated with the old house on the north side of the property, and the current house are all represented on the 1975 quadrangle; the duplex is represented on the 1985 version. None of the structures are within the 500-foot wide corridor for the Preferred Alternative.

Recommendation – Property 9 is not eligible for listing in the NRHP.

Property 17/18

This property, which spans two parcels, is owned by Robert and Marge Guerrant, 7074 County Road 403. Property 17 consists of 152 acres with a farmhouse and several outbuildings. No one was home during the two visits to the property, and it was posted with “Beware of Dog” signs (the presence of several dogs prevented access behind the house). Two barn-type structures are located directly across the road, also on Guerrant property, but on a separate parcel (Property 18). Both parcels are indicated on a 1958 plat map under the same owner, Mrs. J.W. Guerrant. The house, one barn on Property 17, and one barn on Property 18 are all indicated on the 1975 quadrangle. This suggests that this was all one large farm at one time. None of the structures are located within the 500-foot wide corridor for the Preferred Alternative.

Recommendation – Property 17/18 consists of a two-story I-house in good condition with intact multiple brackets, fenestration, and a partial-width porch with wood columns. The house, in combination with the outbuildings (which are in fair condition), constitute a farm complex.

Property 17/18 is recommended as eligible for listing in the NRHP.
