Two concrete block exterior chimneys are new. The original front (river side) porch is missing. The facade has very large 1/1 windows which appear to be original. The wide roof overhang is supported by flat brackets. The second story of a side porch has been enclosed fairly recently, and the rear porte cochere is very new.

The house sits on a broad terraced yard along the blufftop. The large side yard is fenced. A long drive through (doors on both ends) garage sits just behind the house. It has architectural detailing to match that of the house.

1914 Lot 1 - John M. Crouch
1925 S. G. Lewis
1939 G. S. Lewis

The reverend John M. Crouch was probably the brother of C. C. and Boardman Crouch (owners of 84/5 and 98/5), and the son of G. A. Crouch (97/5). He was a minister in Battle Creek Michigan for a time, and is credited with convincing the Real Food Company to locate their new “Per-fo” (for perfect food) factory in La Grange.

The house has long been vacant and is in ruin. Appears to have once been a high style Greek Revival dwelling. The gable roof has cornice returns and a wide cornice, all with well-crafted flat brackets. Wooden sills and lintels on all windows, the door sill in the rear is of hand-tooled stone. The marks of a 1 1/2 story rear ell are still visible on the back wall; the lot was so heavily overgrown that the front was not accessible. Interior woodwork remains in at least one room. Door to hall has two long vertical panels; top of wide window trim is slightly peaked.

Heavily overgrown lot just south of the location of the La Grange College. Several foundations from that school are still visible. Blufftop, facing the river.

29. History: Early Owners, from county tax records

The building has always been city owned; the basement was the original jail, and City Hall occupied the upper level. The 1909 Sanborn labeled it only as a jail, and shows a large fenced yard around the building, into what is now second street. The 1914 Sanborn labeled it both City Hall and Jail, and did not show a fence.
The building served as home to the town’s first public library in 1932.
The roof was restored by the Lion’s club in 1975.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

Brickwork: running bond on front and common bond on back and sides. The paired windows on the ground floor are early or original; the opening is topped by a lintel which matches the others used in the house. (All sills and lintels are wooden.) The second floor doorway on the facade may have been a window originally; the porch it opened onto at one time is missing. There is a small one story rear ell of brick that is not original, but very early. There is a frame addition on the north side of the ell. The back door of the house has four panels, the upper two of which are glazed.

22. Description of Environment and Outbuildings

A stone gutter runs along South Street just south of the house. There is a large frame shed north of the house, very close to the road. A cistern is located north of the house.

Four simple flat pilasters and a pedimented gable end ornament the facade.

22. Description of Environment and Outbuildings: No. of Outbuildings: 0 No. contributing: 0

Debbie Sheals, La Grange Revitalization Organization

March, 1997
Early construction on this building was done according to plans and specifications prepared by Charles S. Skinner, who died in 1854 before the building could be completed. Skinner’s plans called for Ionic capitols on the front pilasters, an ornate entablature, and stucco on the exterior walls. Original interior plasterwork was also done according to his specifications, presumably by Thomas Pryce.

29. History: Early Owners, from county tax records

1867 Wood, March & Co.
1881 Chas. Orange
1899 Eliza Orange
1914 Elvira Jones

This house is said to be one of the oldest in town, possibly dating to 1837, the year this Addition to town was platted. Early owners include Ferdinand and Kitty Gill, who built survey property 113/8 in the late 1840s. A check of deed records failed to turn up from whom Woods March and Co. got the property.

An elaborate paint job has been partially completed, apparently some time ago. There have been very few structural exterior alterations. A small rear porch has been partially enclosed. A bulkhead door is located on the rear foundation wall. The concrete block foundation may replace, or cover, an earlier foundation.

Very much intact, front porch enclosure is only significant alteration. Wire cut bricks are used for the porch posts, stair bases and side fireplace. The shakes on the exterior walls are in very good condition. There are some original wooden storm windows in place, and a small screened porch on the rear of the house which is early or original.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

The truncated hip roof may have had a widow’s walk originally. The house has a large Italianate style bracketed cornice in good condition. The windows sheltered by the front porch have shallow arched tops, and the flat trim around the other windows appears to be hiding similar arches. The thick stucco of the walls and the wide window trim appear to be later additions. The front porch is early, but not original. The house was originally a high style Italianate building, and was probably remodeled early in the twentieth century.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

Appears to have been built as a small brick hall and parlor house with a full width front porch, (ca. 1860). A large frame addition set perpendicular to the original house doubled its size. Addition is probably ca. 1890s or later. Porch was glassed in after the addition, but not recently. Wood lintel and sills in brick part of house.

29. History

Local history holds that this was a College dormitory at one point in time, run by Christine and Molly Smith. That may have happened after 1900.

Pryce bought the property sometime after 1858, according to deed records, and the house was built by the time of the first known tax assessment in 1867. He was a plasterer and brickmason and may have built the house himself. He was very active in early community life; see survey report Chapter Two for more information about him.

C. S. Skinner owned Lot 7, and possibly the others, before the house was built.

Craftsman style front door. Multi patterned shingles in gable ends—alternating double rows of diamond and fishscale patterned shingles. There are two front porches, one on each side of a centered front ell. A room has been added above the porch on the north, and the south porch has been partly enclosed. Porch posts are probably not original.

Wm. L. Ellery

William Linton Ellery was the third William Ellery to practice medicine in La Grange. His grandfather, William Epes Ellery came to the area in the 1840s, and married Lucy La Fon, daughter of one of the area's earliest settlers. Their son, William Ellery, attended college in Philadelphia, and later returned to La Grange, where he practiced medicine for 50 years. William L. Ellery was the third Dr. Ellery in town; he also practiced medicine in La Grange for 50 years. There is a city park named after the Drs. Ellery, and the town celebrated "Dr. Ellery Day" on May 5, 1956. Wm. L. Ellery died in 1962.

(5-6 inch weatherboards are still exposed on the enclosed rear porch.) The ornate front porch, however, is very much intact and in good condition. There is a one story rear ell that is early but probably not original. A side porch was added to it at some point, and enclosed in modern times.

Porch is probably not original. The house has a four panel front door with a two light transom. There is a 1-1/2 story rear ell of brick, and a 1 story ell on the rear of that, both are very early. The one story portion may have started out as a detached summer kitchen. There are two low modern shed roofed frame additions to the brick ells. A large one story side bay may also be a later addition. There is one end chimney in the main part of the house, and end chimneys in each brick ell. This is one of the more intact and well preserved ante-bellem I-houses in the survey group.

A small brick house northwest of this was originally a residence, but has served as an outbuilding for this house since around 1869. See inventory form for 180B/9. The house just south of this one is very similar to it and rumored to have been built by the same person.

Henry Flagler made his living in various types of land and merchandise speculation deals, including buying land grants from soldiers and stage coach horses that needed a rest. He and his wife Isabelle (Vanderbilt), had seven daughters, which prompted him to move his family to Illinois after Federal troops occupied the house next door during the Civil War. They returned after the war, and lived here until at least 1881.

The small house behind this one was occupied by a German cobbler, Christian Graff, when Flagler bought the property. Rumor has it that Flagler bought that building because he was tired of the noise made by Graff’s large family.

This small building was built in two stages; the east end is probably the oldest part. There are two chimneys, one in what would have been the original west end wall, and one in the present west end. The doors have two long vertical panels and have wooden lintels and sills. There is a bulkhead door on the south that appears to lead to a cellar beneath the west end of the house.

This has been an outbuilding for survey property 180A/9 since around 1869. See site plan for that property.

This house is very similar to the house north of it, 180A/9. Like its neighbor, it is one of the more intact and better preserved ante-bellem houses in town. The house has a two level full front porch that is not original. The front doors on both stories have full sidelights; the ground floor door also has a transom. The original windows on the north wall of the front part of the house have been bricked in. The house was sandblasted and tuckpointed a few years ago. The 1/1 wood windows are probably not original. There is a long one story rear ell that may include an originally separate summer kitchen. The wide roof overhang is set off by a simply molded wood cornice.

It was later owned by Wm. McNatt, a salesman for a hardware and wagon company in St. Louis.

29. History: Early Owners, from county tax records

The building served as a church from 1850 to 1978. The bell tower was removed in the 1980s; the bell is now at the First Presbyterian Church in Palmyra. Local history holds that the Presbyterian congregation was so impressed with Rev. W. W. Whipple that they offered to build a good substantial church building if he would agree to settle in La Grange. Whipple, a graduate of an eastern seminary, taught school during the week and preached on Sundays, all in the church building, which served then as a community center as well. The building is believed to have served as the area's first black school, and was the meeting place for the local Lutheran Congregation before they built a church of their own.

This picture, taken in November of 1898, was made from a glass negative loaned by Curtis Farr of LaGrange.

Periodically, the Rock River teste[d] integrated samples of suspended sediment at various locations. An integrated sample reflects conditions in the river from the surface to the bed. (The actual river bottom is not sampled because the size of the sampling

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations:

New siding represents a drastic change; no early trim is visible and the front porch is missing. There is a one story rear ell that appears to be early or original, and a later addition on that. Historic photos reveals that this was originally a simple Greek Revival style house of brick with wide lintels.

This 1-3/4 story house may have started out with a different form, either two full stories or a single story. The Greek Revival door surround and the side position of the front door do not quite match with the central cross gable and the present height. Narrow weatherboards are visible beneath the asbestos siding now on the exterior walls; the front door is newer. There is a tall one story rear ell that is not original.

There are at least three different patterns of ornamental concrete block used on this house. The rusticated blocks of the foundation are also used for quoins, and the porch posts are made of different blocks than are the walls. Large flat lintels above the windows appear to be poured concrete. No significant exterior changes.

This house appears to have started out as a simple Greek Revival double pen. It was probably enlarged and given a Queen Anne porch in the late 19th century. (See footprint on site plan.) The brick part of the house is L-shaped, later frame additions fill in the rear. The Victorian front porch is finely executed and largely intact. The steep cross gable has two different patterns of ornamental shingles, and there is a good deal of spindlework on the porch and at the front gable end. Scrolled brackets and turned porch posts are also largely intact.

There is one small tin covered shed in the back yard, and a small new garage due north of the house.

This house is hard to date—the windows and general proportions appear to be twentieth century, while the front door and wall bricks look late 19th century. It is possible that the front door was recycled from an earlier building, or the house was remodeled around the turn of the century. There is a modern shed roofed addition on the rear of the house, and a bulkhead door on the south.

There is a house shown in this location on the 1878 County Atlas; S. H. Williams is listed as the owner at that time. Articles in the local paper in the fall of 1872 noted that S. H. Williams was building a new house on Fifth Street then, and that the grounds were already surrounded by a picket fence.

A 1902 newspaper article reveals that it was the home of John O. Burns in 1902, and the 1916 Atlas lists the owner as the Burns estate.

Residence of John O. Burns on north Fifth street.

business is left to John Heather, who is always found at his post of duty, and never neglects any part of his work. He owns a pleasant cottage fronting Fourth street, between Washington and Marion streets, and has ample ground for a beautiful yard.

The firm of Heather Bros. carries a heavy line of hardware, stoves and tinware and woven-fencing, besides a full supply of all kinds of farm machinery, including plows, harrows, cultivators, corn planters, binders and mowers of the best manufacture in the land. They are enjoying their portion of the prosperity which has come to La Grange.

GEORGE LARKIN LOUDERMILK.

In the year 1873 George Larkin Loudermilk began the blacksmith's trade and from that date to the present has "found a way at it." The first twenty years or more were spent in the employ of other persons, but in 1890 he began work on his own responsibilities. While business may not conveniently pass from the back room to the front room to wait on his customers.

Although he has not been carrying his stock of shoes more than nine months his sales have exceeded his sanguine expectations, and his trade has increased from the start. He believes in dealing fair with his customers.

JOE A town is something more than a mere planing mill, which most of it is, necessity being a hum, the need of a planing mill is, necessarily.

Logs of all kinds are available locally. In a part of the town there have been mills in the past and mouldings have been made, but it turns out a new life to the added mill.

29. History, cont.
Howe was City Engineer for a total of fifty years, and was Lewis County Engineer for 14 years. He was also known as “Honey” Howe. He was a prolific photographer; many of the surviving early photos of La Grange are from glass plate negatives he created. Many of those negatives are now part of the Curtis Farr collection.

Howe’s father, Charlon Howe, was active in community life in the mid-1800s. C. H. Howe was the editor of the La Grange National American between 1858 and the 1870s, and author of a promotional pamphlet on La Grange which was published in 1872.

The building at left, which says "YESTERDAY'S PICTURES" on it, was a clothing store (later by Clarence Nelson Thomas, 1864-1957) who later owned and operated the Thomas Dairy located on the area; the only railroad depot is at Quincy.

Note the old kerosene streetlight, the latest in illumination in that day.

The major church lies within the Mississippi River along the Missouri side and se of the Historic District of Quincy on a two-lane bridge above Pool 21.

A ferry operates between Canton and Meyer, Illinois.

YESTER YEAR'S PICTURES

This domestic scene of an attractive Victorian lady out walking her dog was taken near the turn of the century.

The lady (not the dog) are identified, but the house is believed to be the residence in LaGrange at 5th and Skinner (404 W. Skinner) on the street opposite the LaGrange Christian Church, where Mr. and Mrs. Jake Edge now reside.

Note the popular picket fence that surrounds the house. Such fences were in wide use at that time for most residences.

The photo was made from a glass negative from the Curtis Farm collection.

Airport. The Quincy airport, Ball regional air service. Two airline Ozark Airlines—operate from Baldy several flights daily.

A large amount of federal land along the pool offers good prospects for recreational development.

There is a large open front cross gable. Paint shadows show evidence of a central front porch, now gone. There are two front doors--one modern, one ca. 1870s. The one story rear ell has some log walls, and may be the oldest part of the house; it is of a different date than the front part of the building.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations
This is one of the more intact hall and parlor houses in the survey group. The facade of the house is not symmetrical; it may have had two front doors or been added to at an early date. Craftsman style front door is not original. There used to be an attic window on the north end of the house. There is a brick and frame extension along the back wall of the house; the brick part is older than the frame section, but is not original.

22. Description of Environment and Outbuildings
No. of Outbuildings 2
No. contributing 1

There is a small newer two car garage at the west edge of the property and an older frame building set directly behind the house. The older building has a door, 1/1 windows and an end chimney of brick. It has a side gable roof and asbestos brick sheathing on the walls.

- 1881 C. B. Boyd
- 1899 G. A. Crouch

George Anderson and Emaline Cox Crouch bought the house in 1882. He was a traveling Baptist minister, and may have come to La Grange for the College. Two of his sons lived nearby; Boardman Crouch built the large house directly to the south, 98/5, and Charles C. Crouch bought 84/5 from Thomas Payne around the turn of the century. 84/5 is located along the north boundary of the park.

The house was built for Boardman N. Crouch, the son of G. A. Crouch, who lived in the house just north of this one. It was designed by Quincy architect E. M. Wood.

Boardman Crouch moved to La Grange with his family in 1882, and spent much of his childhood in the house next to this one. He taught school while attending college, and returned to La Grange to begin a career as a traveling salesman. He worked for Isaac Leesem and Co, and later for a New York clothing firm. He also had interest in a Colorado firm, in partnership with his brother J. A. M. Crouch.

well-crafted art glass windows. There is a polygonal bay on the second floor of the facade, and a similar two story one on the south elevation. A rear side porch is glassed in and used as a greenhouse, possibly per original plans. (The room contains an original, or very early, radiator.)

The interior of the house is in excellent condition and very much intact. Interior features include original gas / electric light fixtures, ornate fireplace mantels, stairway and woodwork. All bedrooms have walk-in closets. The bathroom is compartmented, and a laundry chute was part of the original equipment. All doors and windows are original and in good condition.

Non-original front porch is partly screened. The south half of the house, including the front cross gable, is frame, while the remainder is of brick. There is a rear ell of brick that appears to be original. The frame portion of the front is said to have been built after a fire destroyed part of the house. The foundation is uniform beneath the entire house, and shows window wells under the frame part as well as the brick sections. The standing seam roof over all parts of the house is very early. The windows of the brick portions of the house have wooden sills and lintels. There are some interior log partitions.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

The small front porch has been enclosed, and does not appear to be original. There is a shallow frame addition along the back wall of the house, and another small addition to one side. The rear addition is probably pre-1950. This is one of the less altered hall and parlor houses in the survey group.

22. Description of Environment and Outbuildings

There is a small frame garage at the west (rear) edge of the lot. It has drop siding, a concrete foundation and a gable roof.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

There are polygonal window bays on either side of the house. The one on the south wall is two stories tall, the one on the north has a false balcony above. The walls are sheathed with narrow weatherboards which are beveled at the corners, and a narrow band of decorative shinglework runs along the top of the first floor line. The steeply pitched roof has ornamental circular windows in three gable ends. There is a bulkhead door at the back. The square porch posts have distinctive small flares at the roof junction that are found on only two other survey properties, 116/4 and 147/7. (Same builder?)

There is one chimney in the north end wall, and a bulkhead door on the south wall. A one story rear ell is larger than the original house, and quite a bit newer. This house may be built of load bearing brick; general proportions hint at a heavy structure, and the first known owner was a brickmason.

In 1867 Pryce owned the entire block this house occupies; this was the only developed lot. He is known to have been a brickmason and plasterer; this house could be brick. The small size, and the fact that he owned larger houses at the same time, lead to speculation that this was a rental property.

The house has two front entrances, one on either side of a large front ell. There is a massive chimney at the intersection of the two main roof gables. Roof overhangs have triangular brackets, and there is some half timbering in the gable ends. Well designed, possibly professionally done, or built from stock plans. Possibly built as a home office combination.

This building appears to have started out as a side passage I-house, and to have been expanded to its present form in two different stages, one addition on the east and one on the west. The windows have wooden lintels, sills are wooden and concrete.  There is a low one story frame addition with a shed roof along the rear part of the building.  That addition wraps around to one end to connect with a ca. 1940s garage.  The windows are not original but are more than 50 years old.  The walls have been painted white within the last 20 years.

At least one portion of the building is believed to date to 1858, as that is scratched into a brick on the east wall. It is widely believed to have served as a dormitory for the college in its early history. Wood stoves provided heat then, and some students earned their board by providing wood. It was later used as a millinery shop, and was converted to apartments relatively recently.

29. History: Early Owners, from county tax records

The church had a much larger congregation when the La Grange College was in operation; it was due to College patronage that the building was expanded in 1928.

The original part of the building was built in 1887, on land donated to the school by College president J. F. Cook. The brickmaker for the early project was George Washington, an African American who owned survey property 119/6 from ca. 1869 until after 1881. Washington was listed as a "brickmaker" in an 1872 business directory for the town.

This was the Thomas Marshall Home which is still standing in LaGrange. The photo, taken in the 1920s, was loaned by Curtis Farr of LaGrange.

The two-story frame house was owned for years by the Atteberry family, and is now owned by Melvin Marshall was U.S. Vice President under Woodrow Wilson. Marshall lived in this house for only eight months, until his family moved to Quincy, because they were Northern sympathizers.

The top view of the First Baptist Church of LaGrange, was taken around 1900. The lower picture was taken in the 1920s, right after the educational building had been constructed on the south side.

Many students then attended LaGrange College attended church the building, which was located adjacent to the college campus.

The pictures are from the Curtis Farr collection.

This is the largest and most elaborate church in town. A date stone above the front door reads "Ev. Lutherische St. Peter's Kirche." The brick walls are accented with cut stone pieces, and the brickwork is of very high quality. Brick corbeling accents the front gable end, and the upper part of a large square front tower. Embossed brickwork surrounds most window openings. A polygonal tower occupies the other side of the front gable; it is topped with a steeply pitched roof. The stained glass Gothic windows are very elaborately pieced, and surrounded by wooden tracery. A side entrance to the basement was added in 1924, following excavation to finish the basement space. 29. History: Early Owners, from county tax records

1867 John Klusmeyer
This building replaces an earlier structure of stone, which was built around 1855. Some accounts claim this building sits on the foundation of the old one. The congregation was organized in 1855, and worshiped in the town’s Presbyterian church before they had a building of their own. Services were performed in both English and German until 1921. There was originally a brick school building due west of the church. It was built in the 1860s and used for parochial school until 1930. The school was replaced with a new parish building in 1958.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

This is one of the oldest and least altered of the hall and parlor houses in the survey area. The house has an early or original rear ell which has been extended in modern times. The original weatherboards and other exterior woodwork are in good condition. The front porch was probably added around the turn of the century; it is ornamented with Queen Anne style decorative shingles. The porch posts are fairly modern.

This is one of the earlier known houses in Marlow's Addition, which was platted in 1857. An 1870 abstract for the property shows that the proprietors of the Addition mortgaged this property as early as 1859. Although Wolfmeyer is recorded as paying taxes in 1867, the warranty deed transferring the property to him was not made until 1870.

Gabled dormers front and back. Craftsman style windows and front door, porch is probably in its original form. The farmstead is very much intact; the house may be newer than the outbuildings.

Two large frame barns sit just south of the house, in a fenced yard. There is a 3 bay frame garage with a hip roof just off the northwest corner of the house. One door on the garage is newer, two others appear to be original.

History: Early Owners, from county tax records

1943

J.B. Wolfmeyer (Information from city map; no tax record available.) W. H. Solter owned this property in 1916, and may have built this house sometime after that. The Bungalow form and other construction details point to the ca. 1925 construction date; therefore Wolfmeyer is the first known owner.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

The front part of the house has one internal and one external chimney. Most of the walls are covered with siding, but original weatherboards are visible in places. Original lintel trim over the windows remains in place. There is an early one story rear ell that has been added to. A side porch on the ell was enclosed several decades ago.

The central front door opens to a small vestibule that leads to the two front rooms. Stairs to the second floor are reached from the rear ell. Interior woodwork is intact and in good condition.

The house sits on a hillside in the middle of pasture land. There is a cistern or well outside the back door of the house. There are two new tin covered outbuildings and a small frame shed that is pre-1950. The foundation of two earlier outbuildings are also visible.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

Front doorway, porch and part of the rear ell are all post-1950 additions. (There was originally a one story rear ell.) Pilasters from an earlier porch remain in place. The front “windows” of the house are actually pocket doors which slide into the walls of the house. Louvered panels in the same pockets allow for ventilation in hot weather. Those doors have 9-light windows over two solid panels.

22. Description of Environment and Outbuildings

The city water tower sits very near the front of the house.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

Brickwork: running bond on facade, common bond on sides and rear. The windows have dressed stone sills and lintels on the facade, and wood elsewhere. There are segmental arches over the second floor windows of the rear ell, which was added or enlarged at an early date. Half of the rear ell is frame; both the frame and the brick sections are covered by a single gable roof. The frame part may have been an open porch when new. A low addition to the ell dates to mid-twentieth century. There is an area of serious brick failure on the rear of the front part of the house. The front porch is not original, and is in very poor condition.

22. Description of Environment and Outbuildings

One modern concrete block garage sits northeast of the house.

This large home which is still located in the north part of LaGrange on the hill south of the Christian Church was known, during college years, as the Anne Gullion home, and later the Albert Brose home. In later years it was the home of Mrs. Edda Blackwood Brose, a prominent LaGrange woman.

In February, 1972, a very large sale of antique furniture and possessions from the home was held.

The group of women standing in front are unidentified.

The photo is from the Curtis Farr collection.

Brickwork: Running bond on front (east) and south side, common bond on other walls. Also, the windows of the east and south sides have dressed stone sills and lintels, while the other walls have wooden members. The front porch is early or original; it has fluted columns with small brackets and dentiled trim. A historic photo of the house reveals that an openwork balustrade once ran along the top of the porch. The porch shelters ornate Greek Revival style trim around the front windows and four panel door. The trim is in excellent condition. The roof line along the east wall is accentuated with a heavy ornamental cornice; the west (rear) wall has a simpler cornice. The flattened gable roof has cornice returns on both side walls. (cont.)

A. C. Waltman or Thomas Pryce noted in 1901 that Waltman had built a house which was located on the "Browning property," and the 1867 tax assessment for the property indicates that a house was on the back part of the lot at that time. (cont.)

The cornices of the front and side roof lines have small ornamental brackets. There is a pair of corbeled brick chimneys at each end wall. A large one story frame rear ell is not original, but may be over fifty years old. There is a large open carport off the rear of the frame ell. Overall, this is one of the most intact and impressive houses in the survey group.

29. History, cont.
Pryce noted that during the years 1849-1851, Waltman operated a carpenter shop, and built a few homes, the best of which was one on this property. Also, he is listed in the 1850 population census as a "house joiner." Another historical account mentions the stone foundation of a house being visible behind the current house as late as 1973. It has been assumed that that foundation was from the house erected by Waltman, as the construction of this house has been attributed to Browning. However, later tax assessments are vague, and there is a chance that this is Waltman's early house.

C. R. Browning is said to have been a railroad promoter.
This is a photo of the LaGrange home known in recent years as the C. N. Adams home. This stately and elegant home is located on the northwest corner of Riverview Cemetery hill, overlooking the Mississippi River and was probably built in the 1870s. A warranty deed dated April 3, 1873 for the property indicates its purchase by Martha Browning. The house was probably built by her husband, who was a railroad promoter.

The top view, was taken about 60 years ago, when it was the home of Mrs. Mary Brossi. Carl and Hazel Adams purchased the home in the late 1940s.

A tragedy occurred in the front yard in the 1950s when an eight-year-old boy accidentally hung himself while playing with a rope.

The inset photo shows the house as it appeared in 1973. Note the lattice work on top of the front porch no longer remains. Photos and information supplied by Curtis Farr of LaGrange.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

Basic form and fenestration patterns are evident, and condition is very good. Numerous window changes to front and long two story rear ell. The roofline of the rear section has also been altered. The front roofline is still intact. Scrolled brackets are still in place on the front porch, which has seen several alterations. Part of the original storefront has been filled in with plywood siding. The front entrance has a tooled stone sill.

22. Description of Environment and Outbuildings

Building sits close to the sidewalk and to the building next door, survey property 114/8.
The building was constructed by Ferdinand Gill to serve as a hotel, replacing a two story frame structure he had been using. Census figures show that Gill was the third largest landowner in town in 1850. Pryce referred to him as "Uncle" Ferdy Gill, and noted that he furnished the new building “in fine style for a hotel.” Charles S. Skinner was one of the most important men in La Grange’s early history. He bought the building in 1854 just before his death. The ground floor was the first home of the Farmers and Merchants Bank.

There is a date stone centered in the top part of the facade that reads 1914. There are limestone belt courses on the facade that change to protruding rows of headers on the side walls. Other ornamentation on the facade is of glazed terra cotta and concrete. There have been no major alterations to the front of the building. (New double doors have been installed in the original opening.) There is a relatively modern brick addition to the rear of the building that contains a drive up window on the south wall.

The Farmers and Merchants Bank was chartered in 1903, and has been in continual operation in La Grange ever since. It was the only bank in Lewis County that did not close during the Depression. It occupied survey property 113/8 until this building was erected in 1914. It remained in operation at this location until 1985, when it moved into a building directly south of this one.

Hay was a friend of Abraham Lincoln’s, a connection which no doubt helped him acquire that job. He was town mayor during the 1870s, and was active in community affairs for decades. He was instrumental in getting Monroe Street graded and improved, and was a partner in two additions to the city, North La Grange and the Addition to North La Grange.

Thomas Pryce’s historical column identified this as the house that Hay built when he first moved to La Grange in 1846.

Robert Glore was also a prominent early citizen, and is known to have owned several commercial properties in the area, none of which have survived.

This was Main Street in LaGrange, as pictured on a postcard around 1911. The city will be celebrating its annual Appreciation Days this weekend. Note the bank building, that is down from the Driftwood Cafe. The tall Lewis Building that was located at the present site of the Casey's store was torn down in 1981. The Westcott Drug Store, also at that site, was torn down in 1983.

The brickwork of the facade is constructed with a running bond; all secondary elevations utilize a common bond. The 3 bay house has a low one story frame rear ell with vinyl siding. Window trim, sills and lintels are all covered with sheet vinyl. One window opening on the south has been partially filled in, also with vinyl siding. The Greek Revival style front door surround retains same dentiled trimwork. The 1885 Sanborn map of this house shows 12" side parapet walls; the current roof is probably not original, but is well over 50 years old.

A check of Lewis County deed records yielded one of the most conclusive construction dates for a survey property. Elisha Saunders bought the land for the house from Charles Skinner on 2/2/1846 for $117, and in late 1847 sold the property to Abram Oyster for $950. Thomas Pryce mentioned Saunders in a historical account of the town which was published in the local paper in 1901.

Pryce described this as “a pretty house,” and noted that Saunders “came here as a mechanic, built a few good houses” and went on to become a successful merchant.

At least three generations of the Oyster family were active in the community, beginning with Abraham, a pioneer who owned a large farm of land just south of town, as well as numerous lots in town. David K. Oyster was his son. D. K. Oyster was a prominent businessman who operated a planning mill in town in the late 1800s, and who inherited his father’s landholding south of town. In 1902 he was described in the La Grange Weekly Indicator as “one of our heaviest land owners in or around La Grange.”

David Oyster’s daughter, Iola, was the first owner of survey property 34/3, which is just a few blocks north of this house. His son, William Elsworth Oyster, owned a share of the family farm for a time and was in the hardware business around the turn of the century.

The brickwork of the house has a running bond on the facade and common bond on all secondary walls. The front door has sidelights and a transom; the door itself appears to be from later in the 19th century. The porch posts are chamfered above railing level--original? The foundation extends 2"-3" out from the water table on the front part of the house. There is a 1 1/2 story rear ell, also of brick. The ell has wooden sills and lintels; those on the front part of the house are of stone. There have been some minor window changes. There is also a modern low frame addition on the southern part of the ell. (It is possible that the ell predates the house.)

B. F. Conrath was a salesman for a manufacturing company in Quincy, and was probably related to Geo. A. Conrath, who was the first owner of survey property 127/8, at the corner of Main and Washington Streets.

29. History: Early Owners, from county tax records

A photo of the new house appeared in the local paper in 1902, along with the caption "Cottage recently erected by James P. Porter on North Main Street," in 1902.

Porter ran a livery stable in town at the turn of the century. He started the business on his own, and later went into partnership with his brother, William Porter.

JOSEPH E. BONNEY.

A town the size of La Grange, and being a lumber distributing point as it is, necessarily demands a saw and planing mill. Over twenty years ago Joseph E. Bonney invested in such a mill, which he has kept in operation most of the time, and which has proven a paying investment.

Logs of all kinds are sawed into lumber and much of the lumber handled locally. Is dressed in the planing department of this mill. Persons who have had experience in this line of business and are capable of judging, say that Mr. Bonney has one of the most thoroughly equipped planing

This sign is read, "Hot Lunches." The building is Fred Phelps' lunch car, where hungry persons may secure meals and lunches of various kinds.

It is surprising to know the large amount of patronage Mr. Phelps receives daily. Everything is served in an appetizing manner, and once a patron of the car always a patron, seems to be the feeling of his customers. For about seven years he has been in the restaurant business and he is fully competent to please in that line of work.

Some new windows, but most windows and weatherboards appear to be original, or very early. Shutters are not original. The fenestration of the ground floor facade originally ran window-door-window-door. The left side door has been filled in. There appears to have been an open recessed porch across the rear of the second story; it was filled in at an early date. Finely-scaled dentil trim runs along the cornice above the front porch. Local history holds that there is a secret compartment off one stair landing in the house.

This house probably started out as a small Greek Revival temple-front dwelling or commercial building. The general massing, window details and front door surround all are typical of Greek Revival architecture. The scalloped vergeboards were most likely added during the Victorian era, a time when many local buildings were "updated."

The side deck appears to be the only modern alteration.

John Talbot was an early merchant and leading citizen of La Grange. He owned a general store in the early 1850s, possibly in partnership with Charles S. Skinner. An early historical account written by Thomas Pryce claimed that annual sales in the store at that time totaled $50,000 per year.

This appears to have been built as a multifamily residence, with entrances on the side walls. One wall is sheathed in wide new masonite siding, all others retain original narrow weatherboards. Most window trim is in place, and the front gable end has decorative patterned shinglework. Missing weatherboards on one side wall reveal 12”-18” wide planks beneath.

29. History

This land was in the Oyster family from ca. 1880 on, belonging first to G. W. Oyster, and then to D. K. Oyster, before the house was built for Iola Oyster. The Oyster family was prominent in La Grange throughout the 19th century. Iola Oyster was David K. Oyster’s daughter, and Abraham Oyster’s granddaughter. D. K. Oyster lived just south of this house, in property 93/3, around the turn of the century.

Front set off by a round stone turret with finial at the corner of the house. A band of ornamental shingles runs along the top of the turret and fills the pent gable ends. There are two front doors topped by lintels of what appears to be concrete. The front porch is a modern addition. Small frame addition on south side wall and larger frame ell on rear of house. They both appear to be less than 30 years old.

Flat roof with standing seam and corrugated tin roofing. There is a large corner turret on the front of the building that is capped with a steeply pitched conical roof and lightning rod finial. The north side wall has a set of iron steps, a row of chimneys on the parapet roof, and a corbelled brick cornice. Side windows are topped with segmental brick arches. The brickwork on this building is some of the most elaborate in the study group. Some of the original windows have been covered over, although no window openings have been altered. Two iron columns and an early roller bar for an awning are still visible on the storefront, which is largely covered over. There are few original features on the ground floor interior.

Demolished 6/97. The original facade of the brick building had wide straight lintels over windows on the upper floors and open storefronts at the ground floor level. The cornice was marked with ornate corbeling, which wrapped around to the side wall as well. The upper floors had been covered by "perma-stone" in the 1990s; one of the storefronts was relatively intact. The neon "Liquor" and "Cigars" sign now on 103/8 was on this building prior to demolition.

The south part of the building started out life as a railroad car. The north portion appears to have been built to match the proportions of the original car. The two portions are joined by a slightly taller center section which extends rearward as well. Widely spaced 2x4 rafters are exposed at the roofline of both parts of the building, and a modern shed roof shelters the front of the railroad car.

The building sits close to Main Street, near the southern edge of town. There are two modern house trailers nearby, and an older frame outbuilding sits directly behind the building.

Iola Oyster

The building housed a gas station and diner at one time, and later served as a store. It is now vacant.

Iola Oyster was the daughter of D. W. Oyster, a prominent area resident. D. K. Oyster was a prominent businessman who operated a planning mill in town in the late 1800s, and who inherited his father's landholding south of town. He is the first known owner of properties 59/3 and 93/3, and Iola Oyster is the first known owner of property 34/3.

No significant exterior changes. The roof is very steep, and there are large gabled dormers with cornice returns in the front and back of the house. The wrap around porch has a pent gable roof, and there is a polygonal bay window in the side wall. The walls are sheathed with very narrow weatherboards, which are trimmed with a wide board at the water table and simple pilasters at the rear corners. There is an arched window at the third floor level of the main gable end.

Porch posts are topped with simple flares found on only two other survey properties, 116/4 and 82/4. (Same builder?) An historic photo reveals that 82/4 was originally almost identical to this one; a fire at some point resulted in a new lower roofline on that house.

There was originally an ornate two level porch on the east side of the house; there is no porch there now. The windows of the main part of the house have slightly peaked lintel trim. A lower one story ell on the west part of the house has different trim, and may be the oldest part of the house. The ell has an internal end chimney and small square windows in the gable end on either side of the chimney. There is a new sliding glass door opening onto the rear deck.

They stayed there until 1927. It sat empty then until 1940, when Mrs. Ida Martin moved in. She stayed until 1973, and a year later the original furnishings of the house were sold at auction.

32. Sources
This photo, loaned by Melvin Illa, shows the Jacob Woolf Home at 3rd and Marion Streets in LaGrange around 1900. In later years it was known as the Ida Martin Home.

This was also the home place of Mrs. Lydia Westoff Detwiler, who operated the Westoff drug store in Canton for many years. On April 6, 1974, one of the largest antique auctions ever held in LaGrange was held at this residence. Most of the furniture and possessions had been in the house for almost 90 years.

As indicated in Table 2.23.1, 11 river terminals operate along Pool 21. Four are used for the shipment of petroleum products and two for grain. Eight at the terminals are located in the Quincy area; two are in La Grange, and one is in Canton.

This tattered photo reproduction, in almost as bad shape as the building it portrays, is of the Wayside Inn, which was located on the Ronald Farr farm five miles west of LaGrange. Built in 1835, back in Missouri pioneer days, it was a famous hostelry for years, but spent its last years as a hayway use Pat of t and run.

One of the larger more intact houses from this period. The large wrap around porch is partially screened; there is a smaller open porch on the other side of the house. There is a full basement and cut stone piers on the wrap around porch. The house has a complex plan, and there is a two story bay window on the river side of the building. The current roof was put on the house in the 1930s, following a fire. The original roof was much more steeply pitched, with deep cornice returns. The walls are sheathed with very narrow weatherboards, and a wide trim board tops the water table.

The well-dressed man with the mule may have been a picture of a Democrat on the way to the polls.

Whatever, the photo was taken in LaGrange around the turn of the century.

This stately LaGrange residence, now the home of Mrs. and Mrs. Freed Fish, is located at 207 West Marion, and has a commanding view of the Mississippi River.

At the beginning of the century, it was the home of a president of LaGrange College. Dr. Jere T. Muir (1847-1927) who served as an educator for 60 years --11 years as president of LaGrange College; head of the teacher training department of Kirksville Normal School for seven years, and vice-president of that school for three years. For seven years he taught in the summer school in Culver-Stockton.

The house was later the home of Wilbur Lake, who was for many years mail carrier in LaGrange. Note the ever-present windmill that powered the water supply.

The photo was made from a glass negative provided by Curtis R. Farr of LaGrange.

Extending to facade and common bond on the side walls. The house sits on a corner lot and was built with two primary elevations. The windows on the elevations that face the street have ornate cast iron sills, while those facing away from the road have plainer stone sills. Also, the water table along the Fourth Street side of the house is accented with finely tooled limestone slabs, which wrap around the front of the house to the line where the porch originally joined the wall. That refinement is absent from secondary elevations. (continued.)

29. History: Early Owners, from county tax records

1867  J. M. Cashman
1870  J. M. Cashman
1881  Susan Cashman
1899  M. J. Friedsham

Cashman and his wife bought the land for the house in 1856, and started construction in the summer of 1858. The local paper gave notice of the project, and predicted that the house, "when completed, will be the finest family residence in La Grange." The claim proved true; it is still one of the largest and most elaborate houses in the survey group.

21. Description.

The two street elevations also feature small bracketed hoods over all window except those that were sheltered by the front porch. (The hoods could be a later addition.) An older photo of the house shows a spindlework front porch that was not original to the house, no photos of the original porch were found.

The main part of the side hall house has a heavy bracketed cornice, and wide cornice returns on the side elevations. There is a pair of internal chimneys on each end wall of the house. A wide clerestory window in the roof has matching brackets and small windows. The stacked front doorways feature full door surrounds and ornate paneled doors. Slender octagonal columns flank the front door. A small balcony is cantilevered out from the Fourth Street facade; its pipe railing is not original.

There is a lower rear ell of brick that appears to have been built in at least two different stages. The far end was probably a detached outbuilding to begin with, and was joined to the house several decades after the original construction. The far rear portion of the ell looks older than the central part, and has chimneys at either end, one of which is just 8-10 feet from the main house. (The roof on that portion of the ell has Craftsman style triangular brackets, and was probably replaced around the 1920s.) There is a frame inset on the Fourth Street wall of the rear ell that may have been an open porch at one time, and a larger, later, frame porch runs along the other side of the ell. The porch is in poor condition.

29. History.
Cashman has been widely recognized as one of the town’s wealthiest early citizens. His business interests were myriad; he owned a pork packing plant and a flour mill that were important parts of the local economy, and operated a general store as well.

Brick: running bond facade, common bond on sides and rear. The walls have been sandblasted.
Dressed stone sills and lintels on most windows. There is a one story bay window on each side wall. Some secondary windows have been shortened or filled in. The front doors of both floors have Greek Revival doorways with full door surrounds. The front part of the house has a bracketed cornice and cornice returns; brackets are paired. 29. History.
Hay was a friend of Abraham Lincoln's, a connection which no doubt helped him acquire that job. He was town mayor during the 1870s, and was active in community affairs for decades.
He was instrumental in getting Monroe Street graded and improved at about the time this house was being built, and was a partner in two additions to the city, North La Grange and the Addition to North La Grange.

Lewis County deed records show that he and his wife Elizabeth bought the land for this house in 1852 and 1853, and construction probably started soon after. The house was definitely completed by the first known tax assessment in 1867. The house remained in their possession until sometime after 1881, after which it became the Nelson home.

Brickwork: running bond on facade, common bond on secondary walls. Window sills and lintels are of tooled stone on the front part of the house, and wooden on the rear ell. Some windows on the rear ell are topped with segmental brick arches. The rear ell was built in more than one stage, and is not the same age as the house. Some accounts claim it was built first; others that the original house on the property was a small frame dwelling, and that the I-house was built across the front of that. The frame section was reportedly later replaced with the current ell. The latter account seems more likely, as portions of the rear ell appears to be newer than the front.

The house was built by Jno. McKoon sometime before August of 1858, when he advertised it for sale in the La Grange National American. McKoon owned most of the block in the mid-1850s, including this house and the land upon which the house to the west was built. Jos. S. Todd bought the property from McKoon in July of 1859, for $5,000. in July of 1865. (continued.)

21. Description.
Much original fabric remains, although the house is in fair to poor condition. The roof and original box gutters are leaking and in very poor shape. The name "Emma Glover" is scratched into a window pane in the kitchen.

There is very delicately scaled dentil molding along the top of the broad cornice line of the roof, as well as both levels of the front porch. The two front doors are topped by four-light transoms and the doors themselves appear to be original. The porch is supported by simple square columns, and the cornice of the main house continues along the roof line of the porch.

22. History.
The house at that time was described as having nine rooms, including an entry, pantry and cook room. There were also a number of outbuildings, including a brick smokehouse. None of the early outbuildings have survived.

Although nothing is known of Todd, various historical accounts note that Dr. Hay, who lived one door west, was a long acquaintance of Abraham Lincoln's, leading to speculation that Todd was a relative of first lady Mary Todd Lincoln.

John M. Glover purchased the property in 1865 for only $2,650, offering a clear indication of the effect the Civil War had upon the local economy.

The original one story rear ell is now two stories, a change that may have happened relatively early, as the windows are topped with segmental brick arches. There are also later frame additions on the back of the house.

29. History.
This house appears to have been his residence, and it remained in his family past the turn of the century. (Susan Pryce was his wife.)

Charles C. Crouch purchased the property between 1899 and 1902. C. C. Crouch had moved to La Grange with his family around 1882, and had lived in similar house just a few doors away, on Sixth Street. (Survey property 97/7, which also faces the park.) He was educated in La Grange public schools, and attended the Baptist Seminary for a short time. He married Sue Hagood around 1890.

He went into business form himself in 1889, when he purchased a grocery business on Main Street. He bought this house not long after that, and also invested money in the La Grange Pearl Button Company. Around 1901, he bought the former Climax Mill property, renovated it and induced the Real Food Company of Michigan to open a cereal factory in the building. That operation was an important part of the town's industrial complex in the early 1900s.

A biography that ran in the local paper in 1902 described him as "eminently successful" and noted that "no enterprise of a public nature has been presented to our citizens that has not received Mr. Crouch's support."

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

Gable roof with cornice returns on main house, hip and gable roofs on additions. The house is taller and narrower than many of the I-houses in the survey area. The application of wide new siding and the enclosure of the front porch has greatly changed the historic appearance. There is a one story side ell that has the same foundation as the main house and appears to be roughly the same age. There is also a rear porch that was enclosed before the siding was applied.

22. Description of Environment and Outbuildings

No. of Outbuildings 2  No. contributing 0

There is a small storage shed and a double garage, both modern.

The house is missing its original front porch and is in the process of receiving new siding. The new siding matches the original weatherboards in size of lap. Some windows have been changed. There are two front doors, both of which have one light over two panels.

No. of Outbuildings 5
No. contributing 4

This farmyard has a fairly extensive collection of outbuildings, which straddles County Road 580. Near the house, on the east side of the road, there is a small pyramidal roofed garage and two larger frame outbuildings, one of which may have been a chicken coop. The coop has a shed roof, and the other building has a gable roof. (cont.)

The coop has vertical board siding, and the garage and other shed have horizontal weatherboards. The garage appears to be the newest of the three. Across the road, on the west, is a tall medium sized barn and a small newer open machine shed. The barn is much intact, and retains its shake roofing and board and batten siding. It has a drive-in doorway on the north and a small square swinging door over a second floor opening. A hay loft opening in the gable end is shielded by a triangular roof overhang. There are fenced fields west of the barn.

21. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

This house has long been vacant and is in ruins. It originally had narrow weatherboards, now mostly covered by asbestos siding. The front porch had a hipped roof and Italianate style detailing. The front door opened onto a tiny vestibule which led into the two front rooms. A stairway to the second floor was reached from the rear. Internal chimneys flank the enclosed stairway.

29. History: Early Owners, from county tax records

No early tax assessments were found for this property. The house appears to be on land owned by Herman Hehmeyer in 1878, 1897, and 1916, and Lizzie Hehmeyer in 1916, according to early atlas maps. It is possible, however that it was part of the J. P. Meirant property during that period, as the parcels of land are small and close together.

The house is similar in massing and construction materials to the house on survey property 200/11; the bricks in particular are nearly identical. There is a modern two car garage near the house, and an extremely large heavy frame barn a little further west. The barn is older than the house. The barn has a stone foundation, vertical board and batten wall sheathing and small square windows, some of which have been filled in. The asphalt roof has a projecting hay loft shield. (cont.)

There is a wide, central drive-in doorway to the barn as well as a smaller swinging entrance door. Both are on the east wall, which faces the house. The barn has three additions. There are two fairly small early frame additions with gable roofs on the west end, and a newer concrete block shed on the southeast corner.

The front porch is not original. The stacked Greek Revival doorways indicate the original porch was two-level, probably with an open balcony at the second floor. Dressed stone sills and lintels on all elevations. There is a large, slightly lower rear ell, with what appears to have once been an open side gallery, now framed in. A small shed roofed addition is on the back of the rear ell, and another side ell by the gallery enclosure appears to be relatively modern. The brick walls are painted white at the side with the gallery and new ell, and along the cornice line. The cornice is bracketed on both the front and rear portions of the house. (They appear to be the same age.)
22. Description of Environment and Outbuildings
A nicely intact group of farm buildings. The largest outbuilding is a large gambrel roofed barn which appears to date to around the turn of the century. It has board and batten siding and a concrete foundation. There is also a small frame shed/chicken coop, and what was probably an outhouse, both frame and in good condition.
The house was built in 1869 by Wm. Y. Williams at a cost of $2,700. Williams, who was living in survey property 13/1 in 1867, was mayor of La Grange in the 1870s. He was a wholesale and retail dealer in dry goods, groceries, and hardware. The house was the headquarters or a working farm which contained 42 acres in 1878. Much of that acreage contained fruit trees; Williams is said to have shipped 1,860 boxes of peaches in 1875.

Part of a working farmstead; the house across the road and west of the barn is part of the property. It dates to ca. 1900, but has been thoroughly remodeled. A new two car garage sits near the house. The pond east of the barn is spring-fed and said to have been used by the earliest area settlers.

The 1930 Sanborn Map shows an auto repair shop about where the current tin barn is; they could be the same building.

The building was designed by city engineer W. G. Howe in 1931, and the city council called for bids on the project later that year. J. H. Fleer of La Grange was awarded the contract, and the building was completed by February of 1932. City offices moved out of the building at some point, but were moved back in 1970 after a remodeling project.

James Bohon was a riverboat agent for the Diamond Jo steamboat line for forty years. His daughter Lena took over the job after his death in 1893, becoming the only female to have such a position on the upper Mississippi. Her unusual position gained her a special write-up in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch in April of 1904. She lived in this house for many years and was active in community affairs for most of her life.

LA GRANGE HAS ONLY WOMAN STEAMBOAT AGENT

LA GRANGE, Mo., April 18.
Special Correspondence of the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

MISS LENA BOHON of this city is the only steamboat agent along the Mississippi river, and probably the only one in the United States. She was appointed local representative of the Diamond Jo and Carnival City Packet Companies in the spring of 1893, at the age of 24, immediately after the death of her father, James F. Bohon, who had been agent for the Diamond Jo line 40 years.

Eight men applied for the position. All were representative citizens of La Grange, but Miss Bohon won.

This young woman is now agent for five boats, the St. Paul, the Quincy, the Sidney and the Dubuque of the Diamond Jo Line, and the Silver Crescent of the Cardinal City Packet Co. The latter plies between Keokuk and Quincy, the others between St. Louis and St. Paul.

Miss Bohon has no assistant. She is always ready for duty at the old-fashioned wharfhouse. When steamboats at night announce their approach Miss Bohon, who lives with her mother five blocks away, hastily dresses, picks up her lantern and hurries to the landing place. If she desires the steamer to stop she flashes her lantern in a certain way. Officials of the packet companies aver that she is one of the most faithful, accurate and capable agents in their employ. She sells tickets, makes out freight bills and receipts, collects weekly accounts with the merchants and other shippers; and checks off every bale of hay, bushel of wheat or tub of butter that goes on board a boat. She oversees personally the receiving and discharging of freight.

In childhood Miss Bohon played around her father's office and the big warehouse until she became acquainted with every detail of the business and knew all the navigating officers.

At the age of 15 the affairs of the office could be safely intrusted to her care during a short absence of her father. She evinced a liking for the boats and took deep interest in the great traffic they enjoyed during the palmy days of navigation in that successful period when the Mississippi was full of packets and barges conveying the produce of the river lands to the city markets. She grew up in the atmosphere of this active life and her deal to continue in its environment is but natural.

It is unclear if the large gabled section in the front part of the second floor is new or just in the process of being sided. The house has a very large wrap-around front porch, with round columns and a newer iron railing. The rear porch has slender round columns. There are two front doors, and most exterior doors have transoms above them. There are one story bay windows on two sides of the house. There are very large stone and concrete steps at the front corner of the porch, and the foundation is built of the same stone. The stonework on the house is similar to that of survey property 92/6.

22. Description of Environment and Outbuildings

- No. of Outbuildings: 1
- No. contributing: 1

The house occupies a large corner lot. There is a large frame outbuilding west of the house which sits on stone piers. It has vertical board siding, a large sliding door, and a gabled asphalt roof. It is in fair condition.

Extremely ornate and little altered. There is a small bracketed tower above the front door, the door itself has an etched glass light. Pent gable end of the front of the house has ornamental shingle work of three different patterns. The side gable ends are also highly ornamented, with bracketed deep cornice returns, half circle sunbursts, and bands of ornamental shingle work. There is a bracketed hood over the back door, and both doors have what appear to be original screen doors. Two turned front porch posts have been replaced; balustrades and other posts remain. There is a tall narrow hipped dormer on the rear part of the house, just over the back door.
