42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES
   A frame addition has been constructed on the south end. Window lintels are segmental brick arches, including basement windows. Water table of sawn stone appears at northwest corner but does not continue the length of the house. Despite many alterations, it is possible to see similarities in this house and neighboring house at 509 W. 2nd St., especially in brickwork of windows. Ornamental shutters and porch supports are, of course, modern trimmings.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
   During the 1880s, this was the address of a boarding house for gentlemen, owned and operated by Mrs. Johanna Herrman. A Sedalia city directory for 1884-85 lists six men as boarding at this address: a painter, a shoemaker, a carpenter, two salesmen and another with no occupation given. By 1889, John Pregge, who operated a grocery store at 110 E. Main St., was the occupant. Pregge, who lived at this address for several years, was also operating the Pregge Hotel (by 1906) at 210 W. 2nd St.

44. DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS
   Situated in a mixed commercial-residential neighborhood. There are other houses in the same block but a welding company is across the street and the next block east is all commercial.

18. WINDOW DETAILS
   Window lintels are segmented arches of brick. Water table and sills are apparently of sawn stone. Window style and brickwork very similar to that used on adjacent house at 501 W. 2nd St. There is a two-story frame addition to the south. This addition does not appear on early Sanborn-Perris maps (1888; 1892). But there was a small, centrally located porch on the south originally and apparently a different dimension porch on the east side than at present.

19. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
   This was the home of Morris Harter, who became proprietor of the Sedalia Milling Co. at 412 W. Main St. Harter was listed as the owner in the 1892 city directory. By 1906-1909, the owner was identified as Jewell Harter, secretary of the Sedalia Milling Co. By 1913, the owner was Turner Wilson. Property has had many subsequent owners and occupants. It is one of the oldest houses in its sector of Sedalia. It will be unfortunate if this property cannot be saved and is demolished. Similarities of window treatment and brickwork on this house and adjacent house at 501 W. 2nd St. suggest they were work of same builder. Both traceable at least into 1880s, possibly older still.

   Lancet windows on east facade. Three braces are attached to east outer wall for additional support. South facade entrance probably altered. There is a small shed-roof addition at rear. Asbestos shingles and aluminum siding on exterior walls.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
   Originally this was the M.E. Church South, which was dedicated in 1871. It became the office and shop of the Heynen Monument Co. in approximately 1947. The Heynen Monument Co., one of the oldest businesses in Sedalia, was started (at a location on Pacific Avenue) in 1879. The firm has been producing gravestones and other stone monuments since its inception.

44. DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES
Paneled frieze. Interesting hooded windows. Three-sided bay on east with frieze sections concave to complement curve of hooded windows. Square column porch supports. This house has been extensively remodeled during the past year. An unusual feature is the depth of windows on the east wall. There are four rooms on each floor. Brackets have been removed.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
Originally (1880s) this was a boarding house. First owner/occupant undetermined. City directory listed Charles S. Conrad as the owner in 1890. Conrad was co-proprietor (with J. D. Sicher) of Sicher's Hotel. Property was identified as boarding house in 1906 when owner was listed as Mrs. Etta Selover.

There were three apartments when the house was remodeled last year for its current owner, the Rainbow Inn Day-Night Care Center. Rainbow advertises itself as "Your total day-night care facility."

Residential/commercial neighborhood. No outbuildings.

Raised keystones adorn the flat arch radiating voissours of multiple bricks in second story windows of main facade. Side windows are generally arched with a double row of brickwork. Original storefront has been removed as has the cornice ornamentation. Rear battery of windows includes a couple of triplets. Many windows are boarded up and the partial basement is damp.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE

This structure was the Falstaff Hotel during the first part of the century, with a restaurant and saloon on the first floor. Apparently the hotel became known as the East Hotel for a period in the late 1920s before hard times hit. Then the second floor became a boarding house. The restaurant apparently had various ownerships, being known as the Nathan Edwards Restaurant and the Quincy Cafe for much of its existence. Soft drinks were sold from 544 E. 3rd., at least during the 1920s. Rooms were rented by Mrs. Adeline Fisher, Mrs. Mary Balke, Mrs. D. Bristow and others during the 1920s. The building was a focal point of Old East Sedalia, often frequented by railroad passengers. (It is near the Old M.K. & T. Depot.)

44. DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS

Generally a neighborhood of residential structures with a few commercially-used buildings. The M.K. & T. (Katy) Depot is only a few hundred feet away, to the east. (The Depot--on the National Register--will be sold and made into a center for railroad aficionados or boutique-like shops, it has been reported.)

Oriel window projects from upper level. Italianate headers over some windows. Original cornice at north facade. Pressed metal ceiling. Storefront appears essentially original. There is a one-story metal and frame warehouse addition to the south. Most windows (except for those on main facade) have been covered with metal inserts.

By 1898, this was the Lix Brothers Grocery Co. This building (or a similar one!) appears on the 1888 Sanborn-Perris map and is identified then as a grocery store. But the Lix Brothers did not operate it then, apparently. At least one of the Lix Brothers, William (the other was John) was clerking for the P. Brandt Grocery Co., at 420 S. Ohio Ave., in the early 1890s. By 1906, John T. Byrne was operating a general merchandise store in the building. But the original grocery store operator, assuming that the age of the building has been correctly estimated, remains unknown.

WILLHITE HOUSE
1019 E. 3rd St.

It was a railroad man's house, possibly from its earliest days when a fellow could ride to Kansas City and back on a steam-powered train and get red carpet treatment all the way for under a dollar.

The first confirmed occupant of the ca. 1880s brick Italianate house at 1019 E. 3rd St. was John A. Willhite, who started as a brakeman for the Missouri Pacific Railroad in 1870. Apparently, Willhite and his wife, Mary Louise, purchased the house and sometimes rented rooms to other railroad men. City directories indicate the Willhites lived there for a dozen years or so, beginning in 1883.

Willhite became an engineer for the Mo Pac and used to make the run between Sedalia and Jefferson City. He also had other runs, such as between Lexington and Kansas City, and between Kansas City and Atchison. One day Willhite's big locomotive collided with another train and overturned. He handled that all right but was helpless when his adopted daughter, Bessie, contracted diphtheria, and died. That was in 1895, and by the time of the next city directory a couple of years later, the Willhites had moved to a house in the 300 block of East Fifth Street.

Today the house has gone to seed a bit but is still impressive behind its baroque wrought iron fence. Distinctive details include a five-sided double bay, windows capped with double rows of header bricks in segmented arches, and white-painted brackets and paneled frieze which are repeated in the columned, wraparound front porch.

The house is owned by Arthur A. and Helen Andersen. It has been converted into apartments but only the downstairs is used.

"I've been told that those railroad men used to have some fancy dances in this house on Saturday nights," Mrs. Andersen said.

YEATER HOUSE
420 S. Grand Ave.
624 W. 7th St.

Sedalians may remember him because he was a governor of the Philippine Islands, but Charles E. Yeater is interesting for another, less dramatic reason: He managed to live in two of the city's finest Queen Anne style houses. (And a third just a notch behind the others.)
E. T. Brown's Third Addition

Patrick McEnroe

McEnroe had this two-story brick erected in ca. 1882. He used it as a liquor store and billiard parlor and lived upstairs, at least during part of the 1880s and into the 1890s. McEnroe was among the original Irish who selected East Sedalia as their home. He was an agent for the Schlitz Brewing Co., and previously had worked for the M., K. & T. McEnroe had a second liquor store at 121 W. 2nd St. Beginning in the early 1900s, the building became a boarding house. It has had many owners. McEnroe's ownership apparently ended in approximately 1900.

Further Description of Important Features

Italianate window crowns remain on the three front second story windows. Doorways and windows are arched. Pressed metal ceiling. Five chimneys. Storefront is nonoriginal and not in keeping with the original design of the building. Original cornice, which was probably elaborate and bracketed, has been removed. Second floor is vacant and in poor condition. Basement is used for light storage.

Patrick McEnroe had this two-story brick erected in ca. 1882. He used it as a liquor store and billiard parlor and lived upstairs, at least during part of the 1880s and into the 1890s. McEnroe was among the original Irish who selected East Sedalia as their home. He was an agent for the Schlitz Brewing Co., and previously had worked for the M., K. & T. McEnroe had a second liquor store at 121 W. 2nd St. Beginning in the early 1900s, the building became a boarding house. It has had many owners. McEnroe's ownership apparently ended in approximately 1900.

Sedalia, Mo.
Tall, arched second level windows are an Italianate feature but Palladian-windowed, pedimented dormers, modillions and dentil band and the wide frieze suggest Adam or one of the other colonial styles. In any case, this vintage parochial school building sports some classic lines and is an attractive counterpart to the likewise red-bricked Sacred Heart Church nearby at W. 3rd St. & S. Moniteau. The original cost of the 59' x 88' building was $20,000.

The original Sacred Heart School was replaced by the present building after it became overcrowded. The old building had been located where the rectory parking lot is now. The Sacred Heart parish was established in Sedalia in March, 1882, with classes taught by sisters of the Society of the Precious Blood. Information concerning the founding of the church is contained in the report on Sacred Heart Church (See Inventory Sheet No. 128).

Sacred Heart School is in a mostly residential neighborhood near the central business district. Sacred Heart Church is across the street at the diagonally opposite corner. The Sedalia Public Library is a block away to the east.

the main or south facade, with the windows flanking an extended central section with its own gabled roof. This central section has a bull's-eye window, an arched double-window at the second floor level and an arched main entrance, as well as corner enhancement by quoins of decorative brickwork. The window and doorway arches within this central section are of rough sandstone which also is used for flat lintels and lugsills on numerous other windows (with the exception of second level windows which have segmental brick arches and of course the Palladians). The basement windows are at sidewalk level, more or less, and are surrounded by the building's stone foundation. Their fenestration matches that of the first and second level windows, however.

There is a wide belt molding or water table molding between the high stone foundation and the start of the brickwork.

#36. Additions/alterations:

When the school opened in 1907, there were classrooms on the first floor; a parish hall, parlor and smoking room on the second floor; and a basement containing club rooms, a kitchen, a shower, restrooms and a bowling alley. As enrollment grew, classrooms and other facilities replaced such original units as the parish hall and parlor. In 1929, the bowling alley was removed and a storeroom and meeting room replaced it. Other changes permitted high school classes to be held in the building during the 1940s. A gymnasium was constructed in 1948 (behind the original building) and, in 1954, a lobby was built between the gymnasium and the school. In 1963, the entrance on West Third Street was remodeled.

A fine two-story brick "Parish Center" is located at 304 S. Moniteau.

Original text:

Patterned after the spectacular churches of Europe, Sedalia's Sacred Heart Church has "twin" spires of vastly different dimensions. Specifically, one tower is 175 feet high while the other is 125 feet high. Parishioners knew European churches had been built more or less piecemeal, as money became available from benefactors, which often resulted in additions of various sizes including towers or spires of different heights. This church was meant to be larger and shaped like a cross but this would have cost approximately $20,000 more than was available. The existing church cost slightly more than $40,000. Towers are octagonal with gabled dormers on four sides. Roofline fairly sparkles with activity. Lancet windows, cross finials of stone. Truly one of the finest examples of architecture in Sedalia. Many interior alterations including widening of pews, replacement of the pulpit, installation of electric lights, etc.

Originally, Catholics living west of Ohio Avenue attended this church and those living east of Ohio went to St. Vincent's and later St. Patrick's. Sacred Heart Church originally consisted of German immigrants but by the time this church was built it was open to all Catholics living east of Ohio as well as Germans living west of Ohio. Cornerstone laid May 8, 1892.

There is a truncated (original roof replaced with flat roof) tower on the southwest corner (second story only). Corner brackets, imbricated shingles and decorative panel (latter on entry gable). Large front porch wraps around to east bay. Shutters on some upstairs windows. #36. Tower originally was capped with a roof that was probably peaked.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE

Apparantly this ca. 1897 house was owned by Patrick McEnroe, the East Sedalia developer and liquor dealer, in its early years. A subsequent owner, city directories indicate, was the Michael W. Cadle family. Cadle, an engineer for the Missouri Pacific Railroad, apparently was the owner until approximately 1920. H. Oliver Foraker, identified as the proprietor of a women's clothing store at 215 S. Ohio Ave., was the owner from the early 1920s through the mid-1970s, city directories indicate.

Brown House; Yeater House

This house is a "twin" of the house at 611 W. 3rd St. Its most striking feature is a two-story, hexagonal tower with an onion-shaped roof with a finial. Windows, decorative metal porch supports and aluminum siding are among modern, non-Victorian alterations. Interior said to be newly remodeled.

Charles E. Yeater, the Sedalia attorney who became governor of the Philippine Islands and also was elected to the Missouri Senate, lived at this house briefly according to city directories. Yeater is listed at this address in the 1888-89 directory. Later he lived at two other houses included in the inventory: 420 S. Grand Ave. and 624 W. 7th St. (See Inventory Sheets Nos. 92 and 49). Subsequent owners included Dyson Freeburn, who operated the saloon at Sicher's Hotel; Maurice Wisburgh, and numerous others.

Very lacy brackets under eaves including inside gables. Dapped brackets at some cornice returns. Full-width one-story porch on south, with brick columns and a wooden railing with square wooden posts on top. Porch wrapped around to the east wing in 1908, according to Sanborn-Perris map. Brick porch columns apparently not original. Original kitchen was in northeast section. A frame porch has been added to north and a room was added to the northwest corner (this last between 1908-25). Small bay and basement entrance are relatively recent additions on northeast.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
Original owner was Adolph Riecke, who ran a butcher shop in partnership with a man named Klinge during the 1870s. Subsequent owners included an associate of Horace Greeley (Elisha Sinclair) and George H. Scruton, editor of the Sedalia Democrat. The house was in the Scruton family from 1908 until the early 1970s. A grandson of Riecke, Lee Dow, has an account written by Riecke which identifies the contractors and tells of "trading" the house to Sinclair for a farm south of Sedalia.

Sedalia, Mo.
Donald and Nellie Mae Schlons, co-owners since 1948, have a theory. They think bootleggers might have used the concealed rooms to store liquor or, in some cases, themselves when the law was expected. The Schlons have been reliably told, they say, that their house’s basement was used as an illegal saloon during Prohibition. Today, the basement doesn’t even have an empty bottle to suggest its possibly checkered past.

Actually, the stuccoed brick house almost did talk a few years ago. When a son of Mrs. Schlons was working on the east roof (dormers have been added), he discovered a ledger containing page after page of accounts apparently kept by the house’s original owner and, presumably, builder. Pages dated 1880 and 1881 were filled with hundreds of neatly penned entries recording various sales and occasionally purchases of such things as plums, beans, cigars, grapes, cantaloupe, peaches, cabbage, etc. Unfortunately, the ledger seemingly doesn’t contain the owner’s name. But it does identify many of the farmer’s customers. Schlons plans to hang onto this ledger.

The gable-front house has a gable kitchen addition on the southwest corner, with the gable extending into the main gable as if offset. The secret rooms are in the addition, which was probably designed with a cooking fireplace in the rear. Modifications have included de-windowing a west wall, replacement of wooden porches with slab porches, and lowering of ceilings. Interior woodwork is plain pine.

The Schlons, incidentally, have filled their house with a collection of bric-a-brac that must be seen to be appreciated.

SCRUTON HOUSE
724 W. 3rd St.

Call it coincidence, but the ca. 1876 Scruton House at 724 W. 3rd St. has been associated with Sedalia journalism for most of its existence. But maybe nothing less could be expected of a house once owned by an associate of Horace Greeley of "Go west, young man; go west!" fame.

Call it the Greeley Connection. Greeley and his paper, the New York Tribune, were giants of American journalism. And of all who have called the old brick house at Third and Grand home, the longest residency by far was that of the venerable George Henry Scruton family, certainly giants of the Sedalia Democrat.
The house, a Victorian Gothic, is one of Sedalia's oldest.

It has no real bearing on the structure's age, but a slug recently found in the yard with a metal detector was identified as a Civil War type.

Typical of many Midwest houses of like vintage, the Scruton House has no entry foyer. The front door opens directly into the living room. Originally the front porch wrapped around as far as the east wing. A room was added to the northwest between 1908 and 1925, according to Sanborn-Perris maps. The porch also was reduced to its present dimensions during this period.

The first owner was Adolph Riecke. Riecke ran a butcher shop during the 1870s with a man named Klinge. The contractors were David Hartsber and William P. Cousley, according to an account of his "Sedalia Experiences" written by Riecke and in the possession of a grandson, Lee Dow.

Evidently Riecke tired of city living, for he wrote: "In 1880, I traded (the house) to Elisha Sinclair, former partner of Horace Greeley of the New York Tribune, for his farm south of town." Apparently Riecke was never again mentioned in a Sedalia city directory.

Sinclair may have been associated with a Sedalia newspaper during next few years, but this was not confirmed. By 1883, Sinclair apparently had retired and was living in the 1600 block of South Ohio Avenue. Most of his business activity in Sedalia apparently involved real estate. Occupants of the Scruton House during this period have not been determined, although the information probably is contained in the abstract.
By 1894 the owner was a railroad man, Thomas J. Brown. Brown was chief dispatcher for the Missouri Pacific. After Brown, with only a couple of exceptions during the 1970s, every subsequent owner would be able to get his newspaper for free, delivered to his desk still more or less warm from the presses of the Sedalia Democrat.

By 1905 or so, the house was owned by Wilbur S. Allen, an assistant city editor at the Democrat.

By 1908, the owner was George H. Scruton, already the editor of the Democrat and destined to lead it through years of growth and prosperity. Not only would three of his children (George Jr., Kelly and Allan) serve the paper (two of them as editors), but numerous grandchildren also would join the company at various times in their careers. The senior Scruton remained its editor until his death in 1925. The house remained in the Scruton family until the early 1970s.

The First World War interrupted things. The following is from an account about George Sr. by Hazel Lang, a former Democrat reporter:

With the belief that this country would become involved and wanting to do his part, he, at the age of 55 years volunteered in the National Reserve Corps, was accepted, given a commission as Captain, and on May 16, 1917, was called for service. Assigned to the quartermaster's department he was first sent to Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, and then overseas. He sailed for France August 23, 1917, was promoted to major on December 23rd of that year. In recognition of services performed on special detail duty with the British forces on the firing line, and first line trenches in Flanders, on May 30, 1919, George H. Scruton was made Lieutenant Colonel by special order from the Commander-in-Chief.

Later, Scruton ran an unsuccessful campaign for the U.S. Senate.

Today, owner Ron Jennings (a staff writer for, of course, the Democrat) enjoys speculating about possible guests in his house during the many Scruton years. Harry Truman almost certainly, since Truman was a friend of George Scruton, Jr., when, in 1940, he ran for reelection to the Senate from campaign headquarters in Sedalia. And certainly Bob Worch, the ragtime piano player who did so much to popularize the annual Scott Joplin Festival, would have dined there. And—well, no telling who else those editors brought home as guests.

Jennings doesn't necessarily believe in ghosts, but he figures that if any are hanging around his house, there's a good chance they're at least prestigious.
Decorative brackets which were in place along the eaves during the summer of 1984 have been removed. This house sports a large L-shaped open porch with a deck. Porch supports are square columns. A one-story bay breaks the continuity of the porch on the east. There is an enclosed porch on the northwest. A wrought iron fence surrounds the property. Windows have narrow hood moldings.

Mrs. Anna Felix was an apparent early owner if this specific house existed at this address in the 1880s. Or the house may have been built in ca. 1895, in which case the original owner was William T. Hutchinson, president of Citizens National Bank. The property was in the Hutchinson family into the early 1940s. Bell Hutchinson, a proprietor of the Sedalia Woollen Mills and a former Sedalia alderman, also is reported to have lived at this address during the early 1900s. Bell Hutchinson also lived in the house at 1115 W. 3rd St. (See Inventory Sheet No. 15).

42. Further Description of Important Features

Dominant feature is a nice, two-story bay on the north facade. Bay has three sides, each containing a window. There is paneling under each window of the bay. The frieze under the cornice also is paneled. There are numerous intricate, decorative brackets with pendants. Main entrance has a transom window and a sidelight on only one side, which is unusual. Lace-like brackets at porch supports. Interior remodeled in late 1970s. The main floor has been partitioned into two apartments. A third apartment is on the second floor. The house is attractively painted tan with dark mustard and white trim.

An early owner, if not the first, was Lawrence O'Connor. O'Connor was a produce, poultry and fruit dealer at the City Market. The property was in the O'Connor family until approximately 1910. There were several other owners. One of the more recent owners was Dr. A. L. Lowe.

44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings

Residential block. Garage and shed in rear.

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES

Basically, this house is a Prairie-style with touches of other styles. For example, the tile roof suggests Italian Renaissance while the brackets are typical of that style as well as the more common Italianate. But it has a certain horizontality along with such other Prairie touches as wider than normal eaves, and bands or banks of windows. Decks are supported by combination of square brick and wood supports, and are also balustraded. Hipped dormers.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE The original owner was Bell Hutchinson, who operated the Sedalia Hardware & Grocery Co. at 318 S. Ohio Ave., according to city directories. Hutchinson lived at this address from ca. 1915 through approximately 1930. Subsequent owners were Barney H. Wenner, a proprietor of Wenner Bros. Drugs at 400 S. Ohio during most of the 1930s and into the 1940s, and Okee Rice, operator of Rice Leghorn Farm, after World War II. (First owner Bell Hutchinson also lived at 804 W. 3rd St., directories indicate. See Inventory Sheet No. 13.)

44. DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS

There is a one-story brick garage, 10' x 20', in the rear. Corner lot.
There is a native stone retaining wall of uncoursed ashlar construction at the sidewalk.

The German Immanuel Evangelical Church was organized in Sedalia in 1876, at a time when approximately one-fifth of Sedalians were first-generation Americans who spoke German. The present church was built in 1896, and dedicated on Sept. 27 of that year. It was reported that the site cost $3,500 and the building $10,000. In 1934, the church merged denominationally with the Evangelical and Reformed Church. In 1957, there was another merger with the Congregationalists and the church became known as the United Church of Christ.

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES

This "Free Classic" Queen Anne (classic porch columns rather than turned posts) has a hexagonal tower with an onion-shaped dome capped by a metal finial on the southwest corner. The upper part of this tower has interesting arched windows, imbricated fish scale shingles and mini-brackets along the cornice. Similar shingles appear on a truncated dormer. Cornice boxed with returns.

Albert C. Miner, a passenger agent for the M., K. & T. Railroad, was listed as the owner in an 1898 city directory. By 1903, the owner was Mrs. Jennie Brown, widow of David Brown. Mrs. Brown was the owner until approximately 1920.

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES
   The main entrance at the southeast corner is unusual. This old Queen Anne retains some nice detailing including an oriel window with a dentiled band and an imbricated apron; dentils along the cornice; and decorated gables. The absence of a window east of the entrance suggests that some major remodeling has occurred.
   #36. Aluminum siding, remodeling. Converted into apartments.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
   John Cashman, an attorney, was the apparent first owner from ca. 1897 through the early 1900s. By 1903 or 1904, the owner was Birch H. McCurdy, who operated a livery stable (Rector & McCurdy) in the 200 block of West Fourth Street. By 1909, the owner was Charles McEniry, a livestock dealer who owned the property until the late 1920s or early 1930s.

R. V. Kumm’s Second Addition

- Address: East 1/2 of Lot 9, Block 1, Sedalia
- Description: Southwest corner of East 5th Street and Marvin Avenue

Architectural Features
- Two brickwork arches, accented by a thin band of smooth stone and underlined by a belt of rough stone, dominate the main facade of this building by Sedalia architect and brick contractor John Colaflower. There also is a row of brick arches in the basement, apparently more for decoration than support. Storefront appears to have original supports but has been altered. Front of building has decorative, elaborate brick cornice. Windows have lintels and tugsills of rough stone. Carved stone ornamentation atop main facade.

History and Significance
- History: Apparently this was the second Charles Hoffman & Bros. grocery store at or near this address. An earlier building apparently was replaced by this two-story brick during the mid-1890s. The Hoffmans operated a grocery store until the mid-1900s, city directories indicate. There are gaps in the chronology, but the store subsequently became the Sam Aleskin Grocery Store (1910s, into 1920s) and later Fred Gehlken’s Grocery Store (later 1920s). There have been various other owners. Despite its deteriorated condition, it is a significant building especially so because it is a Colaflower building.

Description of Environment and Outbuildings
- Corner location in basically residential neighborhood near commercial development mostly west and south.

Sources of Information
- City directories; county assessor’s records; observation.

734 E. 5th Street
Sedalia, Mo.
This old Queen Anne probably had imbricated shingles and other detailing in its youth. Several interesting features remain, including the rounded entry porch, L-shaped second floor porch, pent roofs enclosing gables, stained and leaded glass windows, 30/1 and 18/1 upstairs windows, etc. Round wooden porch supports. Wall extensions include three-windowed unit on main facade.

Built in ca. 1894, this house originally was the home of Robert W. Elder, proprietor of R. W. Elder & Co., milliners, at 316 S. Ohio Ave. The next owner (by 1903) was Charles H. Bard, a jeweler, who maintained a jewelry store at 312 S. Ohio Ave., according to city directories. By the 1920s, the owner was Fred Gehlken. The two-story brick building at 734 E. 5th St. (ca. 1895; see Inventory Sheet No. 18) was operated as a grocery store by Fred Gehlken.

and removal of a small walk-out porch which was above the present main entrance and which was columned and balustraded. The tower, which had a scalloped roof with a finial, projected above the veranda to the southeast. Dentils apparently have been removed from the cornice. The chimney on the east facade has been given fresh emphasis—originally, it passed through a gable but today the gable has been reworked and the chimney is visible for its entire length. A hipped dormer has been installed near where the tower met the roof. There is a double bay on the west corner of the main facade with curved or "bow" windows. Lugsills and, where present, lintels, are of rough projecting stone. The lugsills are continued as decorative horizontal bands at both the first and second floor levels of much of the house. The main entrance is arched and recessed and there is a fanlight. There is a panel of decorative brickwork adjacent to the double bay on the Fifth Street side. A connecting garage is topped with a sunporch.

The interior was unfurnished when visited (the house was for sale). Highlights included an elaborately carved wooden staircase said to have been imported from Germany in the entrance hall. This area also has a fireplace with a wooden mantel, a paneled wooden closet under the stairway and a tiered crystal and silver chandelier. A recessed alcove adjacent to the entrance hall has a rounded bay. To the north is the dining room with an original silver and crystal chandelier. The butler's pantry has punched-tin, flower-patterned trim on cabinet doors. With the exception of the entrance hall, interior detailing is sparse for a house of this class and period. It is speculated that the interior was "modernized" during some period of remodeling.

that the reason the Cassidy House was altered so severely was its close resemblance to the nearby Harris House, and Cassidy's desire to own a unique mansion. This is plausible only if the Harris House were built later, since otherwise Cassidy presumably would have ordered a different style of house to begin with. But the Cassidy House is known to have been under construction in 1895, and research for the National Register nomination of the Harris House indicated it also was built in 1895 (for Joseph Imhauser, a local entrepreneur). (For a discussion of the Harris House, see Inventory Sheet No. 33.)
The Cassidy House at 706 W. 5th St. has undergone such extensive plastic surgery that its own mother, if it had a mother, probably wouldn't recognize it.

When it was built in 1895, the Cassidy House was almost a twin of the National Registered Harris House a block away. Both were three-storied, exuberant versions of the Queen Anne style. Today the Cassidy House is like a vintage Cadillac that an eccentric restorer has, for reasons known only to himself, redone as, well, a vintage Chevy. Even the interior seems stripped down.

Ordinarily, such excessive alterations would jeopardize a house's potential for historic recognition. But in this case, the original structure was so spectacular and the modifications so tastefully accomplished that what remains is still of exceptional interest. After all, the Cassidy House was in the same class as the Harris House.

Edward G. Cassidy, an Irishman who came to Sedalia in 1879, was a wholesale liquor dealer, an investor in real estate, and the operator of ice and refrigerator plants. He was also "a pusher and a builder" who was deeply involved in the city's growth during that period when expensive new houses often sported observation towers.

According to early photographs, the house originally had a two-story tower at least as fine as the one on the Harris House. Cassidy's tower was rounded and had a roof shaped like a tall Hershey's chocolate kiss. Betty Rose Thompson, the current owner, speculated that the tower was removed between the world wars during the occupancy of John McGrath and his wife, Kate, who was Cassidy's daughter.*

The original Queen Anne style was converted into a French Eclectic by removal of the tower and by a series of other alterations including: removal of a veranda that extended from near the southwest corner around to the northeast, removal of the porch roof, and removal of a small walk-out porch which was above the present main entrance. (The tower projected above the veranda to the southeast.) A hipped dormer was installed near where the windowed portion of the tower approached the roof. Even the chimney has been given new emphasis.

*There also is an unconfirmed version that the tower was removed, and the other alterations accomplished, early in the house's history when Mr. Cassidy became piqued after Mr. Harris's house sported a very similar looking tower and wanted to pursue a unique design. This would make the Cassidy house older, however, and this also was not confirmed.
The architect for the Cassidy House was W. S. Epperson, and it is speculated that Epperson also designed the Harris House.

The brick structure has been painted a uniform battleship gray, including a projecting rough stone lintel and the narrower projecting rough stone lugsills which are continued as horizontal decorative bands at both the first and second floor levels of much of the house. Other decorative panels and trim also have been painted gray.

The southwest corner has a double rounded bay with bow or compass windows. The arched main doorway on Fifth Street has a fanlight.

An elaborately carved wooden staircase said to have been imported from Germany dominates the entrance hall. This area also has a fireplace with a wooden mantel, a paneled wooden closet under the stairway and a tiered crystal and silver chandelier. A recessed alcove adjacent to the entrance hall has a rounded bay.

To the north is the dining room with an original silver and crystal chandelier. The butler's pantry has punched-tin, flower-patterned trim on cabinet doors. There are eight bedrooms, a sunroom above an attached garage and a second staircase in the north part.

The following construction story appeared in the May 2, 1895 edition of The Sedalia Daily Capital:

A WEST SIDE RESIDENCE
It Will Be Built For E. G. Cassidy
At A Cost of $20,000

Among the many fine residences and cottages which are being built on the west side, this spring, none will be more substantial and more beautiful than the mansion which is to be built for E. G. Cassidy, one of Sedalia's prosperous merchants and enterprising citizens, at the northwest corner of Fifth Street and Harrison avenues within a stone's throw of Edward Hur- ley's elegant mansion, which is now being completed at Fifth and Grand Avenue.

The architecture of Mr. Cassidy's residence is of the renaissance style. The building will be two stories high with basement and attic. It will be heated by steam and supplied with hot and cold water on each floor. Gas and electricity will be used to illuminate the mansion and electric bells and speaking tubes will connect every apartment.

The residence will have two fronts, one on Fifth Street and the other on Harrison Avenue. The Fifth Street entrance will be from a wide stone porch, with an ornamented tile archway, entering into a large reception hall. From this hall, sliding doors lead to dining room, library and parlor. From a recess in the reception hall, an elegant stairway leads to the second story, where are located the bed rooms, bath room and sewing room, all being entered from wide halls.

The Harrison Avenue entrance is reached by a rear vestibule and hall, from a wide porch. Communicating with the rear hall is an elegant buffet fitted up with lavatory, and between the dining room and kitchen is a large butler's pantry, fitted up with stationary ice box, shelves, lockers, etc., which provide all the conveniences possible.

In designing the bath room, the architect has somewhat departed from the usual custom, by detaching all ordinary fixtures from the walls, thus insuring the best sanitary effects. The floor and wainscotting are constructed of beautiful ornamented tile, and the building will be finished throughout in natural hard wood.

Mr. W. S. Epperson is the architect of Mr. Cassidy's beautiful residence and he has evidently made his crowning effort, for which he is entitled to great credit.

Cassidy was "a wholesale dealer for the William J. Lemp Brewing Co.'s beer and all leading Kentucky whiskeys," according to an advertisement in a 1900 Sedalia city directory.

He organized the Lemp's Ice and Refrigerator Co., built an ice plant on West Main Street in 1898, and was president and general manager of the company when it acquired the Sedalia Ice and Cold Storage Co. Cassidy also owned some of the best business blocks, the Katy Building in the 200 block of South Ohio which is now the C. W. Flower Co., the Cassidy Building at 508 S. Ohio, and others.39

This house has been extensively remodeled, at least on the exterior. One of the few Victorian touches still apparent is the balcony above the main entrance with its turned columns and spandrels. The front porch originally wrapped around to the east. The ironwork porch supports and railing, the ornamental shutters and the modern windows are non-Victorian. Imbricated fish scale shingles and other detailing may be under the aluminum siding.

Apparently, this house was built during the 1890s. City directories indicate that the street address may have been changed. E. B. Burrowes, city editor of the Sedalia Gazette, apparently was the owner in 1898. Another early owner apparently was George F. Fisher. Subsequent owners have included John M. Glenn, a traveling salesman, and Joseph B. Kraus, also a salesman.

Description of Important Features

Colonial Revival touches on this house include the classic entry columns, dentilate bands and the sidelights of the front doorway. Researchers had mixed opinions as to style, however; one believed it Prairie. Brickwork quoins of alternate length enhance corners and the theme is repeated in the brick porch supports. There is a small bay on the west and a carport with a deck on the east.

History and Significance

Built in approximately 1908, this was the home of William Jolly and his family from then through the 1930s. Jolly was a vice president of the Beiler Grocery Co., according to city directories.

Description of Environment and Outbuildings

Corner lot in residential neighborhood within proposed Victorian Towers Historic District. Frame 20' x 20' garage in rear.

Stylistically, this building has features of both the Victorian Gothic (pointed arch windows) and Romanesque Revival (semi-circular arch windows). The original building was symmetrical, with a square tower at the juncture of the two wings, housing the main entrance. There are three major horizontal bands of smooth stone: the water table and two narrower bands, one of which is near the midpoint and the other which creates perfect triangles with the cornice trim in both the Sixth Street and Summit Avenue gables. Staggered brick cornice. Intricate carved stone blocks accent the two round arch windows. Lovely stained glass. Brick addition to west. New glass and metal entrance does not harmonize with original beauty. Interior has been remodeled several times. Reroofed 1984.

Originally, this was the Epworth United Methodist Church. The Assembly of God Church acquired the building in 1926. The church, which originated in Sedalia in 1914, first met upstairs at 501 S. Engineer Ave. A church spokesperson said the contractor who built this building also is believed to have built the Smithton Methodist Church.

Corner location. Essentially a residential neighborhood.

There is a one-story bay on the west facade with brackets. Small, one-story frame addition to north. External brick chimney. Plain closed cornice. Double hung 1/1 windows. Smooth stone lussills.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE Jacob W. Truxel, police judge, is the identified owner in the Sedalia city directory for 1898. The house is undoubtedly older than 1898 but an earlier owner was not discovered. By the 1913 city directory, Truxel's widow, Mrs. Sadie Truxel, was living in the house and renting out two apartments. By 1915, the owner was listed as Mrs. Mary Bullard, widow of Hebron Bullard.

Round arches are a dominant feature of this Richardson Romanesque-style church near downtown Sedalia. Constructed of rock-faced blocks of Warrensburg sandstone, typical of the style, windows arranged in a tidy, ribbon-like fashion. Relieving arches occur in several (at least five) sizes. The feel of the natural stone creates a powerful impression. The open bell-tower is another of the building's major elements. If an artist's drawing in a ca. 1893 "Souvenir Album of Sedalia, Mo." is accurate, the original building has been altered. The artist's rendering indicates the present hipped southwest roof was gabled and that the adjacent two-story tower was only one-storied. The artist's drawing also shows an entranceway that extended out from the tower and a one-story, rounded bay at the Sixth Street side of the tower. It is possible that the drawing showed features not actually constructed.

43. The First Congregational Church was organized in 1865 and the first church building was erected at Sixth and Ohio (northwest corner). The present church at Sixth and Osage was built in 1888-89. In 1929, the church merged with the Central Presbyterian Church, and in 1970, it became the non-denominational Community Church of Sedalia.

42. Further Description of Important Features

Symmetry and size are the keynotes of this Queen Anne-styled apartment building. The symmetry is especially striking when one considers the many Victorian elements. There are twin double-deck open porches with round classical columns, twin upper level enclosed porches, symmetrically placed single and paired windows, etc. There is a Palladian window in the large, centrally placed front dormer. This and the other gables, all symmetrical, contain imbricated shingle trim. Also present are decorative brackets, transom windows, balustraded porch railings. Basic structure is U-shaped, with the open space between the wings facing the rear.

This building was designed as an apartment house and so it remains. There were only two apartments when the address first appeared in the city directories in 1913, occupied then by the families of George Press, of Press Clothing Co., and Conrad Bothwell, cashier at the Sedalia National Bank. By 1915 there were four apartments (rented to E.C. Pfenning, J.E. Wrightman, J.B. O'Brien and B.J. Kiest). Today there are still four apartments, each consisting of five rooms. Assessor records indicate there are 2,660 square feet of floor space on each of the two main levels.

Further Description of Important Features. A two-story, round tower with six curved glass windows protrudes through the southwest corner of the large wraparound (east and west sides as well as front) porch. Imbricated, fish scale shingles fill the gables and clad tower. #36. Roof overhang extended by 12 ft.; front porch modified; basement room added; original tower roof may have been removed; interior extensively remodeled including lowering of ceilings. Large variety of window sizes; some leaded stained glass. Essentially the same house appears on a 1908 Sanborn map. City directories indicate the original owner was Clay S. WhitSEL, a livestock dealer, beginning in ca. 1902, and that the property remained in the WhitSEL family into the late 1940s. During this period Jennie M. WhitSEL was listed as the owner from 1908 until approximately 1920, when the owner became John I. WhitSEL. Current owner James Eschbacher (since 1966) has traced the house's ownership and his research indicates the first owner was Jennie WhitSEL rather than Clay S. WhitSEL, and that it remained the property of the WhitSELS until 1954 when it was inherited by a niece of Mrs. John WhitSEL, Mary Cecil Booth (wife of Wiley Booth). But the Booths sold the house in 1958, Mr. Eschbacher reports. Mr. Eschbacher also reports that John I. WhitSEL was Jennie's brother.

43. History and Significance. The house originally had gas lighting system as did many Sedalia houses. Second lighting system used a Delco battery system. Several battery jars and a few instruments connected with the system are still in the house.

Sedalia, Mo.
Despite some apparent alterations, this house retains some unique Victorian elements. From the SW facade springs a turret clad in fish scale shingles, rising to an onion-shaped dome capped with a spiral finial. The roof line appears to have been changed, partially enclosing this turret. There is a rounded, two-story tower on the southeast. A room addition above a carriage port is non-original. A foliated frieze decorates the tower at the roofline and the foliation also appears in a gable above the entryway. Unusual dormer with imbricated "basin" at apex of main hipped roof. Many new windows.

The Sedalia Democrat on Nov. 12, 1896, reported: "J.T. Crenshaw, the mail contractor, has broken ground at the northwest corner of 6th & Harrison, preparatory to the erection of a handsome $10,000 residence." By 1904, the owner was Evi B. Farley, president of the Beiler Grocery Co. at 301-07 E. Main St. The Farleys lived at this address into the 1940s. A subsequent owner converted the structure into apartments but the current owner, there approximately four years, uses the entire building as a residence.

Frame 18' x 24' garage. Residential neighborhood within proposed Victorian Towers Historic District. Directly across the street is the Harris House, which is on the National Register of Historic Places.

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES Two-story tower, turreted oriel, sweeping veranda, carriage porch. Smooth stone water table, lintels and lugsills on most windows. Turret on northeast corner of main facade. Five chimneys. Main entrance framed by elliptical brick arch supported by two stone columns with capitals. Building in excellent nearly original condition. Interior richly appointed in various woods. (Above description based on nomination for National Register.)

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE Originally built in 1895 for Joseph Imhauser, a local entrepreneur, according to National Register nomination. There is an alternate, local impression that the house was built later than 1895, by Henry W. Harris, a banker (who in any case ended up living there into the 1920s, when he died.) This local impression continues as follows: The Harris House was built after the E. G. Cassidy House at 706 W. 5th St., which Harris so admired that he commissioned his to resemble it (as it did). But Cassidy resisted this and ordered major alterations in his Queen Anne, which transformed it into today's French Eclectic. Tentative findings indicate only that the Harris House may have been built a bit later than 1895, but this is not actually substantiated. Additional research is badly needed to resolve this, since two of Sedalia's priority houses are involved. (Cassidy House was definitely under construction in 1895. See Inventory Sheet No. 22.)

44. DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS Separate carriage house at rear. Quiet residential neighborhood. Within proposed Victorian Towers Historic District.

45. SOURCES OF INFORMATION John Knapp; National Register nomination; city directories; various Sedalia newspapers; etc.

Eppenauer said the abstract indicates that a Mr. Love borrowed money against the property in the 1870s. This could mean that the house was built then, or that a different house that no longer exists was built then, or neither.

The foundry which Cravens headed pioneered in the manufacture of gas and gasoline engines, and also produced store fronts, cane mills, grate bars, sash weights, and iron and brass castings of various types.

HARRIS HOUSE
705 W. Sixth St.

It's difficult to talk about the Harris House, 705 W. Sixth St., without gushing superlatives. But that's the way it often was when a Victorian had the wherewithal to indulge his fancies. Like a Clydesdale, the Harris House is more magnificent than ostentatious.

From its distinctive two-story tower and turreted oriel to its sweeping veranda and Quezal light shades, the big red brick mansion easily lives up to its reputation as Sedalia's "preeminent Victorian landmark." Architectural historian Claire F. Blackwell, who is used to looking at Missouri's finest, called it "significant as an exceptional example of Queen Anne architecture in the Pettis-Benton County area and as a building surviving in virtually unaltered condition."

Originally built in 1895 for Joseph Imhauser, a local entrepreneur, the house was purchased by Henry W. Harris less than three years later. To Harris, one of the area's wealthiest and most enterprising businessmen who was soon to become president of Sedalia's Third National Bank, the house must have seemed perfect. Its style and layout of rooms made it an ideal focus for Sedalia society, and such it was to become.

There's even a third floor ballroom and billiard room where Harris or his guests could entertain themselves and then, with partner or cue stick in hand, stroll into the tower and survey the neighborhood scene below.

Even at night the house is spectacular as the moonlight plays over the "steeply-pitched, hip roof which bursts into gabled, pent, polygonal and hipped roofs over the many bays, porches and balconies."
The Harris House was nominated for the National Register of Historic Places in 1979.

Inside, decorative details and expensive touches abound. A different type of wood is used in each of the main floor rooms—oak, cherry, maple and bird's-eye maple. Even such functional items as gas jets, door hardware and bathroom fixtures are elegant and contain decorative detailing. Combination gas and electric ceiling fixtures, no two alike, enhance each major room.

Harris, a Kentuckian, was a latecomer to Sedalia but he quickly made his mark. Already wealthy after spending 24 years in the mercantile and grain business in Pilot Grove, Harris became director of the Missouri Trust Company of Sedalia. In 1902, he was named president of the Third National Bank, a position he held for approximately 20 years until his retirement.

Today, the banker's house is no longer in the Harris family but it remains in "mint" condition.

HEARD HOUSE (FERGUSON HOUSE)
501 W. Broadway

The first thing most people notice about the big white frame house at 501 W. Broadway is the circular front porch that curves around the base of a two-story tower. But the old Queen Anne has many other head-turning features. For instance, there's a highly decorated dormer in the tower's conical roof. On the west, an unusual double bay tapers skyward.

But to Mrs. Kathleen Richholz, whose husband Garry purchased the house in 1969, the most unique thing is something not so obvious: a landing between the second and third floors where the walls seem to curve away from a "porthole" (actually an oval) window, producing what she describes as a nautical or "riverboat" effect.

"It was designed kind of like a riverboat," Mrs. Richholz said she was told by a son of Dr. Wilson J. Ferguson, a former owner, who returned with his children several years ago to show them the porthole window.

The house was built in 1891 for John T. Heard, a Congressman who later commissioned what is now the Heard Memorial Club House at 200 W. Broadway. Both houses are in fine, nearly original condition. Heard lived at 501 W. Broadway until approximately 1900.

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES

Despite some Prairie features, the shingle cladding of the second floor is the dominant element. The original roofing may have been wooden but today is asphalt. The shingled walls handle corners without interruption of corner boards. The lower story is brick. Windows are treated simply but tend to appear in pairs or bands. Behind the pair of stately evergreens that assure privacy is a gable-rooted open porch with square brick supports and, to the east, a brick patio. There is another brick patio off the northeast corner, and an enclosed porch at the northwest corner.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE

Original owner was Elliot M. Stafford, president of the J. A. Lamy Mfg. Co. Stafford, also an official of the American Exchange Bank, moved into the house in approximately 1914 and lived there many years. Vintage shingle style houses are rare in Sedalia.

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES
   This immaculate, brown brick, 2½-story structure with full basement is easily the finest example of a Greek Revival house in Sedalia. Its features include a balconied entry portico with fluted Doric columns, an arched north window with tracery and an elaborate, pilastered surround (above the portico); a balconied, L-shaped porch around the southwest corner; pedimented dormers;

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
   Original owner was W. E. Bard, Jr., a prominent Sedalia druggist whose father, also a druggist, was a settler who came to Sedalia from Pennsylvania. Bard Jr., who lived across the street at 720 W. 6th St. (See Inventory Sheet No. 36) while construction was under way, operated drug stores at 108 W. Main St. and 416 S. Ohio Ave. (There is still a Bard Drug Store in Sedalia, at 412 S. Ohio Ave., although it is no longer in the Bard family.) The house at 717 W. 6th St. was the Bard family home until approximately 1930 when both Mr. Bard and his wife became ill and died while on a vacation in Europe, reportedly of a "tropical fever."

and windows with wide, keystone lintels. Corners are enhanced by quoins of brickwork. The entrance doorway includes 12-unit sidelights. There is a small, balconied porch near the southeast corner. The cornice is boxed, enclosed, and decorated with modillions above a broad frieze. Bands of sawn stone are used as belt courses. There is a strong impression of symmetry, especially when the house is viewed from the north and west. The interior is richly appointed and finely maintained.
W. E. Bard, Jr.'s parents were settlers who came to Sedalia by way of Pennsylvania. Which is appropriate, since the house he commissioned at 717 W. 6th St. looks as if it came by way of Philadelphia. Classical lines and symmetry are what you notice first. Stylistically, several influences are evident, even Georgian. But the dominant one seems to have been Greek Revival, which began and ended in this country with public buildings built in Philadelphia. Some key features are the pedimented dormers and the balconied entry portico supported by four fluted Greek Doric columns with bases.

The house was completed in 1905. Bard, like his father a prominent Sedalia druggist, lived across the street at 720 W. 6th St. while it was under construction, and before.

Current owners are Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Swearingen. Mrs. Virginia Swearingen, asked in a questionnaire to elaborate on her house's history, wrote:

Mr. Bard died while he and his wife were on a trip to Egypt in (approximately) 1930. As Mrs. Bard was bringing his body home, on a stopover in Italy, she also passed away. Their adopted daughter, Estelle, and her husband, Harry McNamara, went to Italy to bring both bodies home.

Coincidentally, Mrs. Bard's sister, a Mrs. Carmen, was a civilian POW of the Japanese in Santo Lomas in the Philippines during World War II. There she became close friends with Miss Rose McKee, originally of Leavenworth, Kansas, who was my husband's great-aunt. Small world!

The Greek Revival symbolized a past that was missing and held the promise of a great future but already was considered an obsolete style by the time it reached West Sixth Street. The later Victorian styles--the Italianate, in particular, was "a more fitting symbol and a more serviceable form"--gradually replaced it. This is readily apparent in Sedalia where the proportion of Victorian/Italianate-influenced houses to Greek Revival is much greater.

(There are some who see Greek Revival in every little Folk cottage that has turned porch columns, but maybe that's stretching it a bit.)

In addition to a strong impression of symmetry and the previously mentioned dormers and columned portico, exterior features of this immaculate... house include boxed and decorated cornice emphasized by a wide, divided band of trim; windows with wide keystone lintels, and corners accented by quoins of matching brick.

Double rows of sidelights and column pilasters flank the main doorway.
A belt course of smooth stone divides the two floors and a wider belt course separates the foundation from the brickwork. There is a balconied, open, L-shaped porch around the southwest corner and a smaller balconied porch near the southeast corner.

A compelling feature is the arched north window with tracery above the portico and especially its elaborate, pilastered surround which reinforces the Greek temple motif. Light spilling into a stairway landing at the base of the window provides good viewing for a family portrait gallery and nourishes a collection of house plants. There's another arched window with a simpler doubled brick surround on the rear (south) facade.

The house also has one of Sedalia's first basement recreation rooms,
Mrs. Swearingen said.

The first owner, W. E. Bard, Jr., operated drug stores at 108 W.
Main St. and at 416 S. Ohio Ave. His father was one of Sedalia's earliest merchants. Today there is still a Bard Drug Store, at 412 S. Ohio.

Hipped roof, square triple-story tower with imbricated fish scale shingles is dominant element of this Queen Anne. Tower has dentate band at cornice and is capped with a rounded finial. Fenestration also is interesting in that with few exceptions, windows are paired or doubled. Windows below pedimented gable on south facade sport unusual trim.

W. E. Bard, Jr., lived in this house from approximately 1897-1903 prior to moving into the house he commissioned across the street at 717 W. 6th St. (See Inventory Sheet No. 35). But for most of its existence this house was the home of Peter Courtney and later Hugh Courtney. Peter Courtney lived at this address from approximately 1904-13. Hugh Courtney (whose occupation was listed in city directories as sales, farmer, and agriculturist) or members of his family resided here from approximately 1914 into the late 1930s.

An unusual element is the triple, Palladian-like window in the gabled dormer on the north facade. Technically, the Palladian has a center arched window flanked by two narrower windows with a square lead; in this case, the flanking windows are curved. Hexagonal two-story tower with unusual roof treatment. Central chimney. Slender classical porch columns. Patterned (fish scale) shingles on upper level. Front porch wraps from north to west.

Dr. Fred M. Fulkerson, a dentist, or his family was the apparent original and long-time owner of this property. City directories indicate Dr. Fulkerson was the owner from ca. 1897 through the early 1940s.
Werner House

South side of West Sixth Street at Dal-W1-No. Court

Apparent original owner was August F. Werner, a tinner who apparently applied his craft to the entire upper level, cladding it in pressed metal. Werner had a shop at 218 E. 2nd St. He specialized in furnace work, tin and slate roofing, galvanized iron cornice, steel ceilings, guttering and metallic sky lights. Current owners Joe and Millie Alyea are restoring this house.
1017 W. 6th St.
Sedalia, Mo.
The Werner House at 1017 W. 6th St. was built for a tinner who applied his craft to the entire upper level, cladding it in pressed metal and creating one of the most unusual Queen Anne's in this area. His name was August F. Werner.

The exterior ca. 1907 house is like a Victorian's dream. (Like a Victorian's dream gone awry, some would say.) So many devices vie for attention more or less simultaneously that, apart from the pressed metal columns that serve the same function as the Queen Anne's more common shingle trim, it is difficult to identify the dominant element.

Nor is it necessary. Victorian architecture was nothing if it wasn't exuberant. Exuberance was a characteristic of full-blown Victorian architecture and it is the exuberance itself that dominates, rather than a single element.

Beyond the panels, some of the major elements here are massive, steplike brackets at the gable corners; elaborately crowned enclosed porches in the gables; a decorative front pediment with a classical face and floral elaboration in relief; an arrangement of bays that must create some uniquely shaped rooms; and cresting on the roof.

No significant non-Victorian note is sounded in the entire symphony. The porch supports are smooth, wooden Tuscan columns instead of the usual turned spindles or beveled square posts found on the generic Victorian house but they are nonetheless Victorian. Two rooms have pressed metal ceilings.

Werner, the tinner, specialized in metallic skylights, furnace work, tin and slate roofing, galvanized iron cornice, steel ceilings and guttering. He had a shop at 218 E. 2nd St. He "disappears" from the directories after 1913, apparently having either died or moved to another area.

The house has had many owners and was in a state of disrepair when it was purchased by the current owners, Joe and Millie Alyea. The Alyeas are renovating their house and are excited about its potential.

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES
This house, traced back into the 1880s, contains a wealth of unusual Victorian trim especially in its gable detailing. Elaborate decorative brackets are large and conspicuous. Splayed bargeboard. Spoke and sunburst trim. Both imbricated shingles and wood siding used in gables. Central portion of north gable extends outward and contains three windows. It is the featured treatment of this central portion that is most unique. Main

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
Doorway is at northwest corner but there also is an unusual arched head near the southwest corner. Narrow, decorative hood moulds above some windows. Note: Renovation is reportedly under way.

Joseph F. McDougall, a train dispatcher and freight agent for the M., K. & T. Railroad, was the long-time owner of this house. The Sedalia City Directory for 1883 lists McDougall as the owner, occupation train dispatcher. Over the years he became a freight agent and then a foreman in the M., K. & T. shops. By 1941, Titania McDougall, apparently Mr. McDougall's widow, was listed as the owner. The property remained in the McDougall family until approximately 1960.

An Italianate with paired decorative brackets along the eaves, this house appears to have a remodeled front porch with a room added on the southeast corner. Closed cornice. Metal awnings. |

The foundation appears to be concrete block rather than stone as would be expected on an 1880s house, but city directories indicate this house was originally the home of George W. Neely, an engineer, or his family, from ca. 1883-1903. A two-story frame structure resembling this house appears on an 1888 Sanborn-Perris map. In any case, the next (or first, if the present house came later) owner was Michael Boylan, a conductor for the Missouri-Pacific. The house remains in the Boylan family today. The present owner, Mrs. Jessie Bender, is the former Jessie Boylan. |

HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE

City directories indicate the first owner was John W. Carlisle, a conductor for the M., K., & T. Railroad. The Carlisles lived in the house from ca. 1894 through approximately 1906 or 1907. Subsequent owners have included August Glahn, a cigar manufacturer, and Joseph Saner, a brakeman for the Missouri Pacific Railroad. Saner or his family lived in the house from approximately 1915 until the mid-1940s.

The basic house appears relatively intact (although no early photographs were seen). But there have been numerous additions including a basement and chapel to the south, canopies and a one-story addition and canopy to the north. A 2-1/2 story tower of patterned masonry and a two-story bay with a decorative chimney are distinctive original features. This was a major Sedalia house designed by W.S. Epperson, the Sedalia architect who also designed the E.G. Cassidy House at 706 W. 5th St. (See inventory Sheet No. 22) and very possibly the Harris House at 705 W. 6th St. (See Inventory Sheet No. 33).

Formerly (Roe-Ewing F.H.) in mid-1930s, this structure was a private home and, later, a masonic temple. The first owner was James Glass, a wholesale liquor dealer, from approximately 1895 through 1908 or 1909. After Glass, the next owner was E.C. McGurren, proprietor of a restaurant and saloon. It was McGurren's house from approximately 1908 through the mid-1920s. After a brief change of ownership, the house was purchased by Addalla Grotto of the Shrine Club. The building served as a meeting space and headquarters for the Grotto until 1934 or 1935 when it became Roe-Ewing Funeral Home. A few years later it was known simply as Ewing Funeral Home as it is today.

This building is located in a multi-purpose neighborhood consisting of commercial, office and other buildings as well as private residences.

Unusual Multiple Description of Important Features

Unusual multiple hipped and gabled roof. Queen Anne spindlerwork on porch and in gable detailing which includes imbricated shingles in two patterns, decorative corner brackets and sunburst trim. Wraparound porch. Bay on east. An 1898 Sanborn-Perris map indicates the 11' x 15' addition with a deck on the north was not part of the original building.

History and Significance

Charles J. Yost, a grocer (C. Yost & Son, 614 S. Ohio Ave.), was living at this address in 1883, according to the city directory. The property was in the Yost family into the early 1900s, directories indicate. (Mrs. Elizabeth Yost and Washington W. Herold are listed at this address in 1904. By 1908, the owner was William Arenson, directories indicate. Apparently there have been many subsequent owners. Note: Charles Yost also is associated with the adjacent house at 420 W. 7th St., city directories indicate, during essentially the same time period. Additional research is needed to clarify whether there were address changes or whether one house is substantially older than the other.

28. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES

An Italianate-style house with such typical Italianate features as a low-pitched roof with eaves supported by decorative brackets and hooded windows, a touch which is barely carried out in this example by narrow, decorative crowns. Brackets also present on one-story bay and deck overhang of one-story full-width front porch. Porch supported by square columns.

29. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE

This house was associated with Charles Yost, grocer, during the 1880s and 1890s. The adjacent house at 416 W. 7th St. also is associated with Yost during the same period, according to city directories. Both houses appear on 1898 Sanborn-Perris maps in substantially the same form as they exist today. Alfred B. Thruston, civil engineer, was the listed owner in the 1900s. By 1915, the listed owner was A. J. Crain, an employee of the M., K. & T. Railroad.

42. Further Description of Important Features

Nicely preserved example of early Victorian architecture in Sedalia. Gable detailing includes imbricated shingles, sunburst trim, bull's eye window. L-shaped open porch on SW corner, with sun porch over W section. Arched windows including some with similarly curved upper panels (2/3 lights). An Italianate element in doubled decorative brackets along cornice. (This house walks a fine line between Folk Victorian and Italianate!) Three chimneys including an exterior chimney of unadorned brick on the east. Wide sawn stone water table. Latticed porch on NE with spindlework frieze.

43. History and Significance

Internationally famous movie actor Jack Oakie (Lewis Delaney Offield) was born in this house in 1903 to the first owners, James M. and Evelyn J. Offield. Young Offield moved to Oklahoma with his father upon the death of his father, and later to New York. James Offield, married earlier to the former Alzira Boone Gentry, was an early Sedalian involved in farming, real estate, shoe sales, groceries, hardware, etc. His son, Jack Oakie, appeared in more than 100 films including at least one certified classic, "The Great Dictator," with Charlie Chaplin. Another owner was Frank S. Leach and his wife, Blanche Leach. Mrs. Leach became well-known during the 1920s and 1930s as a writer and director/producer of historical pageants throughout Missouri and nationally.

Prepared Date

Sedalia houses often had decorative "sunbursts" in their gable trim, a stylistic detail common to several varieties of Victorian architecture. A giant sunburst radiates from the west gable at 522 W. 7th St., the house where internationally famous movie actor Jack Oakie was born.

Built in the 1880s, if not earlier, this two-story brick also was the home of Mrs. Blanche Leach, a writer and director of historical pageants who gained a national reputation during the 1920s and 1930s.

The house also happens to be a fine and well preserved example of early Victorian architecture in Sedalia. The construction date has blurred a bit, but apparently the house was built no later than 1886 by James M. Offield, Oakie's father. Offield, one of the city's original residents, came to Sedalia soon after the Civil War.

The unknown contractor eschewed most of the elaborate detailing that appealed to many builders of Victorian houses, opting instead for tasteful simplicity.

Walls are 15 inches thick, including an air space, and consist of three courses of brick. Reinforcing bricks placed at intervals lock the second and inner courses. W. H. Eppenauer, the current owner, marveled at the structural system but pointed out that the bricks are unusually soft. He speculated they were fashioned at or near the site by the builder.

"It's about as comfortable of a house as I've ever known," said Eppenauer, a retired surveyor.

Light spills into the living room through large panes of wavy Belgian glass. The double-hung windows are especially interesting in that the upper two panels are of glass curved to match the bricked arches. Each sash contains two 14x36" lights. The unfinished attic has stained glass dormer windows and a bull's eye window.

A balustraded railing shown in old photographs has been removed from atop the L-shaped porch. Another small porch on the west has been enclosed. A porch on the east side is latticed.
Two of the three fireplaces have been covered. The remaining fireplace in the living room has a relatively plain but interesting mantel. There are sliding doors between the dining room and a bedroom. Smooth wooden columns between the living room and dining room appear to have been added. The stairway landing apparently has been widened.

Offield, the first owner, was involved in a variety of enterprises: farming, horses, shoes, real estate, groceries and hardware. He built a three-story brick block building which became a grocery store at the northwest corner of Second and Osage, and which he subsequently traded for farmland. Offield platted Sedalia's Dundee Addition.53

In 1903, Offield and his second wife, the former Evelyn Jump, had a son they named Lewis Delaney Offield.

Lewis changed his name to Jack Oakie and became a famous actor, a beloved actor actually. He appeared in more than 100 films, often playing college roles and co-starring with actors such as Richard Arlen, Buddy Rogers and Johnny Mack Brown. Oakie's best known film may have been the 1940 classic, "The Great Dictator," in which he played Mussolini to Chaplin's Hitler.100

A plaque placed near the sidewalk south of the house by the Pettis County Historical Society reads: JACK OAKIE, INTERNATIONALLY BELOVED MOVIE ACTOR WAS BORN HERE NOVEMBER 12, 1903. Oakie, who left Sedalia as a child after the death of his father, was on hand for the ceremony.

RUCKER HOUSE
509 W. Broadway

From its Texas-sized rooms, wooden columns in the hallway and atomic bomb shelter under the concrete front porch, the big Eclectic Prairie style home at 509 W. Broadway makes a strong first impression. And that's not to even mention its White House connection.

"Some of the house's character seems to rub off on you," said co-owner Mrs. David G. Curry. "You expect something important to happen to you when you live in a house like this."

Originally built in 1912 for Dr. Everett A. Wood, a physician, the house's other owners have included Pettis County prosecuting attorney Roy W.

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES
    A lovely Queen Anne, one of Sedalia's finest. Projected bay at the floor level on south facade. Fish scale shingles and irregular roof system with hipped, gable, and truncated gable, hipped dormer, etc. Open front porch with a railing-enclosed deck and another deck extending east and wrapping around the NE corner to the north where there is a two-story porch, which is enclosed. Interior abounds with fine woodwork including spindlework in doorways, parquet flooring, a carved and paneled staircase, and a carved mantel set with ceramic tiles thought to be imported from the Philippines.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
    This was the third and finest of the houses lived in by Charles E. Yeater which are included in the present inventory.
    (See also Inventory Sheets Nos. 10 and 92.) The house was originally built for James H. Doyle at a cost reported to be $5,000 in 1891. Doyle, president of a building and loan company, was the father of Elizabeth Doyle whom Charles Yeater married upon his return from the Philippine Islands where he had served as governor. He lived in the house with Mrs. Yeater from approximately the early 1920s until his death in 1943. In addition to serving as governor, he had been a Sedalia attorney and a Missouri Senator.

44. DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS
    Residential neighborhood.
    Frame two-car garage (20' x 24'). One-room summer kitchen, frame. 10' x 12'.
    Corner location within proposed Victorian Towers Historic District.

45. SOURCES OF INFORMATION
    City directories; Mrs. Woolery; county assessor's records; observation, article, "C.E. Yeater Passes Away on Tuesday," The Sedalia Democrat, undated but 1943.

42. Further Description of Important Features
Sanborn-Perris maps indicate that south and east porches originally were connected. In addition, the maps show an interesting semicircular area which may have been a one-story tower. Alteration occurred sometime after 1925. Some of the more obvious Queen Anne features remaining include corner brackets, patterned masonry chimneys, bay windows, imbricated shingles in gable ends, unusual porch supports, etc.

43. History and Significance
This house reportedly was built for Dr. W. M. Carter, a dentist, at a cost of $4,200 in approximately 1896. The architect was Thomas W. Bast, who is credited with designing many of Sedalia's Victorian dwellings. The address previously was listed as 802 W. 7th St. The Carter family resided in the house through the early 1930s.

A square tower, clad with imbricated shingles, is near the southwest corner. This house sports a variety of decorative shingles, window styles (including at least one Palladian) and bracket trim. Transom window over front door. Turned wood porch supports. Finial atop tower. Imbricated shingles in gable. An outside stairway has been added on east side.

James W. Popham, an insurance agent, was the indicated first owner. In approximately 1919, house was purchased by Thomas A. Major, a real estate investor. The house remains in the Major family today.

Further Description of Important Features

Upper two-thirds of house is covered with at least three types of wood shingles (diamond, even and uneven). Unusual two-story bay on east extends from middle of first level to upper cross-gable. There are small brackets and a tiny window beneath the bay. Siding is narrow. There are decorative shutters. Triple window in south gable is accentuated by decorative stickwork.

History and Significance

A 1904 city directory lists George K. Mackey, secretary of the Mackey Shoe Co., as the owner. Mackey eventually became president of the shoe company and the property remained in the Mackey family into the 1940s. The Mackey Shoe Co. was located at 114 S. Osage Ave.
906 W. 7th Street
Sedalia, Mo.
Round three-story tower, clad with imbricated wood shingles and capped with conical roof. Leaded, stained glass windows in upper sashes of third level windows. Square column porch supports. Three-sided bay (two-story) on east side. Exterior appears original.

Original owner probably Harry R. Finke, travel agent. Subsequent owners include Charles J. McEniry, proprietor of a tobacco store at 227 S. Ohio.
Dal-Whi-Mo Place
Lot 16
Block 4
North side of West 7th Street between South Park and South Quincy Avenues

An early owner is believed to have been William F. Waller, manager of the Sedalia Printing Co. Waller lived at this address from approximately 1896 until approximately 1903, city directories indicate. An earlier owner than Waller is possible. Subsequent owners have included William C. Chappell, retired, from approximately 1904 until after 1915.

Fanciful gable trim. Small second story porch with archedway and round supports. #36. Apparently the strange "gable" protruding from main hipped roof was created by the addition of a second level room or rooms (as well as the hipped roof itself). The main porch also appears to have been changed. Transom and leaded glass windows. Aluminum siding.

42. Further Description of Important Features

Symmetrical brick cottage with cross-gables and near-twin porches (E is deeper) E & W of main bay. There is a centrally located stained glass window on the main facade, and a half-moon window directly above it in the decorated gable which is covered with imbricated fish scale shingles. Gable window is emphasized with large semi-circular molding with foliated trim. Transom windows above doors. Pressed design in brickwork above some windows. Rough stone lintels and lugsills. Brick belt course at water table.

43. History and Significance

This is the only surviving residence built by as well as lived in by Sedalia brick contractor/architect John Colaflower, as far as could be determined by current research. The original cost was approximately $3,000 (in 1891). Mr. and Mrs. Colaflower lived at this address for only a few years during the 1890s before moving to a house on East 16th Street. Colaflower, sometimes with a partner (Alonzo B. Rowlett), specialized in brickwork including mantels, chimneys, sewers, walks and buildings. His surviving work includes the F.E. Hoffman building downtown and a building at 734 E. 5th St. (See Inventory Sheet No. 181).

COLAFLower HOUSE
1201 E. 10th St.

The Colaflower House, 1201 E. 10th St., suggests that a man can build castles without necessarily wanting to live in one.

Not that the symmetrical brick cottage which John T. Colaflower built for himself and his wife in approximately 1890 wasn’t a fine addition to Sedalia’s architectural landscape. But this was the same man who built the spectacular Broadway Presbyterian Church (since razed), the Woods Opera House (since razed), and the F. E. Hoffman Building (a five-story building which today has only two stories), all more or less artistic triumphs.

Colaflower designed his own house to be more cozy than imposing.

Features of the cross-gabled dwelling include arched panels with floral trim surrounding tiny half-moon windows in the pedimented gables, a pressed design in the brickwork above major windows, rough-faced stone lintels and lugsills, a brick belt course at porch floor level, stained glass and transom windows. The original cost was approximately $3,000.

The Portrait and Biographical Record of Pettis County had this to say about Colaflower:

In 1872, embarking in business for himself, Mr. Colaflower began as a contractor for public sewers and large cisterns in Kansas City. Two years later he went to Morgan County, where he engaged in prospecting and mining. In 1876 he removed to Texas, and, settling in Sherman, in partnership with his father, built a brick plant and manufactured brick. He also did a large business as a contractor and builder, and many of the business houses and private dwellings of that city were erected under his personal supervision. About 1875 he was temporarily employed in Sedalia, and in October, 1879, he located in this city permanently.

Forming a partnership with his father, Mr. Colaflower built a brick plant on the corner of Ohio and Twentieth Streets, where for two years he manufactured brick. Two years later he removed the plant to East Fourteenth and Engineer Streets, and there continued the business until his father’s death in 1888, when he sold out. Since that time he has devoted his attention to the contracting business, and many of the most substantial structures of the city are the result of his skill and artistic ability. Among them are the Knights of Pythias Hall, Storey Block, W. Z. Baum's building, the Sheldon residence, Opera House, Broadway Presbyterian Church, Messerly Flats, Prospect School, and the F. E. and Charles Hoffman buildings. In the busy season he employs from twenty-five to fifty men. His reputation for energy, skill and ability is of the highest, and at all times he has as much work as he can attend to.

At No. (1201) East Tenth Street, on the corner of Engineer, Mr. Colaflower has a commodious and well appointed residence, erected by himself and containing all the modern improvements. The lady who presides over this cozy home was formerly Miss Frances Mitchell...99

The Colaflowers only lived at 1201 E. 10th for a few years. Apparently none of the various other houses they called home have survived.

CRAVEN HOUSE
720 S. New York Ave.

There are scores of well-preserved little Folk Victorian houses in Sedalia. But only the Craven House at 720 S. New York Ave. has (a) an upstairs room with four turret windows, (b) animal hide insulation stuffed in its walls, and (c) a widow's watch to cap it off.

The ca. 1880s house was the home of William Craven, superintendent of the old Sedalia Foundry Co. (later the Wells & Craven Foundry Co.), during the 1880s and 1890s.

The highly symmetrical house (apart from a couple of additions) also has fishtail shingles on its upper level, a sidelighted entrance, and matching porches on the north and south wings. The basic shape is the unusual cruciform. But the turret windows on all four sides of the main upstairs room, which are actually gabled in, are its most distinctive element.

As former owner W. H. Eppenauer put it, "It's such an unusual house that it must have taken someone with a strong character to live there!"

It was Eppenauer, a retired surveyor, who discovered a fibrous material which appeared to be some type of animal hide while repairing the north wall. From its placement inside the wall, it apparently was intended as a type of insulation. It works just fine, he said.

This rather symmetrical Victorian house has Queen Anne detailing in its front gable (imbricated shingles and "tree branch" trim) and in its treatment of porches (turned columns and balusters; jigsaw cut trim). There are additional imbricated (fish scale) shingles in panels immediately above the front porch. There is a larger porch on the east.

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES

When built, this house was "in the country." It was the home of Nathan and Eliza Montgomery. The date of construction is undetermined. By 1900, city directories listed the owner as Mrs. Eliza A. Montgomery, widow of Nathan. Two of the Montgomery's daughters became teachers in Sedalia (Lydia and Mattie). Lydia eventually became principal of Washington School. Mattie, who taught mathematics at the high school, lived in the house through most of the 1940s. She never married. The current owner, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon D. Smith, acquired the property in the 1950s.

43. DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS

Frame garage 20' x 20' and small storage shed. Residential street where houses often are on large lots. When built, this part of Sedalia was mostly farmland.

This church originally had a square tower approximately in the center of the roof structure with windows in all four sides. The tower was removed in 1918. Unusual finial-topped, domed canopy entryways on Broadway. Interesting bay under large circular window on south. Today this window contains a panel inset with four 'small' circular windows. An artist's drawing indicates this window originally was a single stained glass unit (ca.1893)
43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
There is a frieze of ornamental brackets beneath cornice. #36. The parish hall to the north, a somewhat discordant element, was added in 1951. In 1954, the interior was remodeled and a pipe organ installed. Congregation organized 1865. Plaque placed by Pettis County Historical Society states that Calvary Episcopal is the oldest church building in continuous use as a church in Sedalia. First service was held on June 27, 1886. (The first services of the Episcopal Church in Sedalia were conducted in the summer of 1865 in a school building at the NW corner of Osage and Pettis.) The cornerstone for the present church was laid by the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Robertson, Bishop of Missouri. The original cost of the building has been reported as $12,000.

Original ownership was not determined. But in 1897-98, the owner was listed in a Sedalia city directory as the Rev. Gerard R. Patterson, pastor of Calvary Episcopal Church. Subsequent owners have included William A. Latimer, cashier of the Third National Bank. The property may have served as a parsonage during its early years.
George E. McNeil, a surgeon for the M., K. & T. Railroad, was an early owner, in 1898. Subsequent owners have included other railroad workers, Edwin Manchester, an engineer for the M., K. & T., Harry E. Muir, a machinist for the Mo Pac, Edward A. Doll, who ran Doll's Bakery at 1200 S. Ohio Ave., William M. Alcorn, a helper at the Mo Pac, and A. Louis Grassburn, an insurance agent. There have been numerous other owners.

Property is on south side of East Broadway in a residential block. The north side of East Broadway in this part of the city has some commercial development.

windows on all facades. Square bell tower at southeast with brickwork crosses. Panels of stone trim tastefully placed at mid-level. Matching trim on tower and roofline of main facade.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
    This church, built in 1926, is the third building used on a permanent basis by the Epworth Methodists in Sedalia. The previous building, at Sixth and Summit, is now the First Assembly of God Church (See Inventory Sheet No. 122). The present yellow brick structure was built after the congregation became too large for the older building at Sixth and Summit. The original cost was reported to be $75,000. A stained glass window visible from Broadway is illuminated nightly. The window depicts Christ reaching for the lost sheep. Historically, the church was organized in Sedalia on May 21, 1877, at the home of the Rev. Frank Oechsli. Early services also were held in a carpenter's shop and at a fire station. The first permanent church was constructed at Fourth and Montgomery.
Located in a residential-commercial section of Broadway within the southern half of the area known as East Sedalia.

This 2-story, light brown brick residence-turned-clubhouse is a fine example of the Italian Renaissance style as interpreted in Sedalia. Massive brick piers combine with classical (smooth Ionic) columns to support the flat portico roof. There is a large Venetian window on the west facade above a carriage porch. This arched window, imported from Italy, depicts a Originally the residence of retired U.S. Representative John T. Heard and Mrs. Heard, this structure has since 1935 served as the meeting place of two of Sedalia's oldest clubs for women: Sorosis and the Helen G. Steele Music Club. Construction is believed to have taken two years, 1904-06. Heard, whose father came to Missouri from Kentucky, became an attorney and was admitted to the Missouri bar in 1862. He subsequently entered politics, and was elected to the Missouri General Assembly (1872), the Missouri Senate (1880), and the U.S. House of Representatives four years later. He served ten years. He was a retired Congressman when he bought the lots for his new house in approximately 1904, from J.H. Rodes. A previous house, a one-story brick, had occupied...

Venetian canal scene flanked by intricately patterned panels of stained, leaded glass. A belt course of smooth stone encircles most of the house at the second floor level.

Dormers have three types of roofs: hipped, elliptical arched and round arched. Curved tiles are used on the main roof as well as the carriage porch and a carriage house at the northwest corner of the property.

The east facade includes a one-story, three-sided bay and a one-story covered porch at the rear.

The interior is richly appointed and extremely well preserved. Much of the furniture is turn-of-the-century.

The reception hall contains Ionic columns at its north end. West of the main entrance, which includes a small vestibule, is a recessed area with a window and a love seat. There is a fireplace with a massive mantel of wood and brick, one of four in the house. There is a parquet floor with various patterns made from seven types of wood: maple, oak, cedar, walnut, cherry, mahogany and pine.

The first floor also contains a music room, a breakfast room, kitchen, and an auditorium which has been fashioned by removal of a wall between the former living room and drawing room. (Removal of this wall and construction of a stage at the north end of this area have been the main interior modifications. The kitchen was modernized in 1952.)

Exterior alterations also have been few. The only major exterior alteration has been removal of a balustraded porch with a deck or balcony from the south end.

the site and was the residence of John P. Gass, principal of Broadway School, during the 1890s. Heard apparently lived for a short time in a nearby house, at 214 W. Broadway, while his mansion was under construction. Another house commissioned by Heard, at 501 W. Broadway, survives and is included in the present survey (See Inventory Sheet No. 68).

Heard died in Los Angeles during the winter of 1927. His widow, Mrs. Lillian C. Heard, died in 1934. Mrs. Heard bequeathed the mansion and its furnishings to Sedalia's two oldest women's clubs, for their exclusive use. Each club, Sorosis and the Helen G. Steele Music Club, meets there twice a month.

the main floor features hand-carved detailing. Two rooms are of oak, one is cherry and the living room is a combination of oak and cherry. First floor ceilings are coved: Instead of coming to a right angle, there is a concave zone where the planes intersect.

By 1976, the wooden floor and other parts of the huge circular porch had deteriorated. The porch bed was redone with concrete and bricks, but the original columns with their subtle floral detailing were salvaged. The scallop trim along the upper section of the porch was missing but was reconstructed according to its original appearance on an old photograph of the house from the collection of Mrs. Lillian Wells, Sedalia.

The house apparently was the first built on the south side of West Broadway's 500 block. Its original cost was $7,000, according to a new construction story in the July 3, 1891 issue of The Sedalia Morning Gazette.

HEARD HOUSE
200 W. Broadway

It is entirely appropriate that the copies of Hostess Magazine neatly arranged on an upstairs coffee table are from the 1930s.

The John T. Heard House, 200 W. Broadway, has been essentially "frozen in time" since the death of the late Congressman's wife, Mrs. Lillian C. Heard, in 1934. Congressman Heard died in 1927. Today the house is much as they left it—including twin mahogany "sleigh" beds upstairs, Battenberg lace curtains, and Ionic columns at the north end of the reception hall. Much of the furniture is turn-of-the-century. Everything is so well preserved that it has the atmosphere of a museum.

Yet the house is used by hundreds of people each month, an apparent contradiction. It happened like this:

Upon her death, Mrs. Heard bequeathed the house and its furnishings to Sedalia's two oldest women's clubs, Sorosis and the Helen G. Steele Music Club, for their exclusive use. Each club meets there twice a month. Members are fastidious in their efforts to preserve the mansion and its furnishings. The only significant structural change made by the clubs has been removal of an interior wall between the drawing room and dining room.
to create an auditorium for musical programs and meetings, said Mrs. Mary Louise Cain, chairwoman of the Sorosis Club.

Features include a large Venetian window on the stairway landing between the first and second floors. This arched window, visible on the west facade above the carriage porch, depicts a Venetian canal scene flanked by intricately patterned panels of stained, leaded glass. Imported from Italy, the window is believed to have spent some time on a Missouri River steamboat en route to Sedalia, according to Mrs. Cain.

Construction of the buff-colored brick home began in 1904 and was completed in 1906. The style is Eclectic Italian Renaissance, although some of the style's hallmarks--arches above doors and first-story windows, a recessed porch and decorative brackets--are absent. The south porch on the main facade has an interesting combination of massive square (brick) columns and smooth Ionic columns.

The contractor was Daniel Dean, a son of one of Sedalia's original settlers, Frederick George Dean.

Today the house appears to be National Register material (as does the earlier Heard House), although it has yet to be nominated.

Parquet floors of seven kinds of wood arranged in various patterns are found on the first level. West of the main entrance--which includes a small vestibule--is a recessed area with a window onto Broadway and a love seat. A massive mantel, apparently mahogany, surrounds a fireplace--one of four--on the west wall of the reception hall. Nearby, the pendulum of a massive grandfather clock swings to and fro, to and fro. Elaborately framed portraits of Congressman and Mrs. Heard decorate separate walls.

Down the hall, beyond the Ionic columns, is a music room with glass partitions and a wide glass door. The canvas-covered walls of this room are decorated with hand-painted designs depicting musical instruments. Ordinary light bulbs wear sweaters of crystal beads.

Opposite this room is the auditorium--formerly the drawing room and dining room--used as a meeting area by the women's clubs. A stage has been constructed at the north end and two pianos occupy it. The east wall of what had been the drawing room contains a fireplace with a mantel dominated by fluted columns with large volutes.

Farther down the hall is the Heards' breakfast room, a small sequestered area with leaded glass windows in pink, green and transparent, and a large built-in China cabinet with complementary leaded doors above and below a row of drawers. The light shade also is of leaded glass with a floral design. The adjacent kitchen was modernized in 1952.

The second floor consists of a sitting room, den, bedroom, hallway and bathrooms—all in original, immaculate condition—and an unfurnished area on the north end. The basement includes a large "summer" living room, kitchen, laundry area, baths, and quarters for servants. West of the mansion is a brick carriage house with matching curved tile roof. A black wrought iron fence encircles the property.

One of the few external alterations was removal of a balustraded, square-columned porch which extended from the southeast corner to the east bay.

John T. Heard was born in Georgetown.

His father, George Heard, came to Missouri from Kentucky in 1817, settling first in Saline County. The senior Heard came to Pin Hook in Pettis County in 1835. Two years later he moved to the area that was to become Georgetown, where he built a cabin of square-hewn logs.

George Heard taught school—the first in Pettis County—and practiced law while living in Georgetown. 46

John Heard also became a lawyer and was admitted to the bar in 1862. He was elected to the Missouri General Assembly in 1872, and in 1880 he was elected to the Missouri Senate. He resigned his Senate seat four years later to run for Congress. He was elected to the House of Representatives where he served 10 years. 47

Heard was a retired Congressman in 1904 when he bought the lots for his new house from J. H. Rodes. Construction began the same year. During construction—a period of between two and three years—Heard's address was 214 W. Broadway, a house that no longer exists. Although the 1906 city directory continued to list Heard's address as 214 W. Broadway, it is believed that this was the year he moved into the house that still bears his name.

Heard died in Los Angeles in 1927, where he and Mrs. Heard were spending the winter.

Hazel Lang, a local historian, described social affairs at the Heard house in her history of Pettis County:

It was for Lillian that he built this home and in it they entertained elaborately. She was a small woman with dark hair, and very dainty. Her home was that way, too, with pink bows and always arrangements of delicate pink and blue flowers centering her table. She was very exacting and when she was having more guests than chairs to her dining room table she had slip covers made for those chairs and the others she used so all would look alike. Many of the city's exclusive social functions were held there and frequently important people were house guests. The dinner parties were delightful affairs usually with a dozen to 20 guests, and until they could have the party just as they wanted it, they didn't have it. 48

E. Hurley House
501 S. Grand Ave.

The half-page advertisement in McCoy's Sedalia City Directory said: "E. Hurley & Co., Contractors and Builders, Estimates on All Kinds of Building on Short Notice."

But Hurley's work, including his ca. 1895 mansion at 501 S. Grand Ave., was always its own best advertisement.

Originally known as Hurley's Hall, the three-story brick Queen Anne is a fascinating mixture of curved lines, towers, dormers, finials, belt courses and windows. Unfortunately, the building's character has been

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES
   This house originally had a wraparound front porch which is being restored as part of a general renovation by the current owners.
   There is an unusual double pedimented, three-sided double bay on the east. This bay features a variety of Victorian trim including panels, imbricated shingles, decorative brackets, square eaves containing fan or sunray detailing, etc. Bullseye windows on three facades. Unusual hipped and gabled roof. Single story bay on south. Small porch at rear appears to be a more recent addition.

   The original owner may have been John W. Conner, county recorder, who lived in the house from (at least) 1883 through approximately 1887. One of the earliest owners was Dr. Daniel T. Abell, an examining surgeon for pension applicants. Dr. Abell moved into the house in approximately 1897. After his death in the 1920s, the property remained in the Abell family until 1948. A house with many similar features occupied the adjacent east lot until a few years ago when it was razed and replaced by a medical clinic. The Conner-Abell-Sisemore House is believed to be the oldest surviving house on West Broadway. Location is within proposed Broadway Historic District.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
   Location is on the edge of the central, business-developed section of West Broadway.

Historic home falls to time, neglect
By John Reidy
Staff Writer

Time marches forward, and sometimes even treasured and beautiful things don't survive.

Despite efforts to repair a historic house at 407 West Broadway, the residence is being torn down because it was found to be structurally unsound. The Gothic revival home, which was built in the 1870s, is believed to be the oldest surviving house on West Broadway.

Only a shell now remains of the one-grand residence. Lumber has been torn from walls no longer able to support themselves. The decades have done their work on this old house.

Bonnie Lutjen, 1201 South Ohio, recently bought the house with the idea of renovating it, but that turned out to be impossible.

After receiving a loan from Third National Bank and beginning work, Lutjen said it became apparent the house couldn't be saved.

"We started to remodel it, and the walls began to move. There also were 4- and 5-inch cracks that kept getting bigger," Lutjen said.

Lutjen said Third National Bank bought back the loan and made the decision to demolish the structure.

According to a survey conducted by the Missouri Office of Historic Preservation, the original owner of the home may have been John W. Comer, a county recorder, who lived there from 1883 to 1887.

Only a shell remains of the grand Victorian residence that has stood at 407 West Broadway since the 1870s.

The house was to be refurbished by Bonnie Lutjen, but was found to be structurally unsound.

One of the earliest owners was Dr. Daniel T. Abell, as examining surgeon for pension applicants. He moved into the house in 1897, and it remained in the family until 1948.

The roof, which was the first part of the structure to be demolished, was unusually hipped and gabled, the survey noted.

"We had been told when we bought it that it was structurally sound, but that wasn't the case," Lutjen said. "It was a mess when we bought it, but it was just a beautiful house."

Lutjen said she understood the property was to be turned into a parking lot.

407 W. Broadway

Sedalia, Mo.
fairly easy to incorporate at least some of the Prairie features in any new house, and the typical suburban ranch houses that were built by the millions are considered direct descendants.36

Good examples of the Prairie style as interpreted in Sedalia can be seen in the "twin" houses at 715 W. Broadway and 901 W. Broadway. For what is basically an American Foursquare design, they manage to look relatively low-slung with only a few Prairie touches.

The balance of this chapter will focus on the history and significance of 26 selected Sedalia structures. It is a sampling rather than a comprehensive accounting. Many fine houses not featured below are nonetheless described in summary form in Volume Two which consists of inventory survey sheets, photographs and floor plans. Quite a few houses are not discussed at length because they are similar to others. In some cases, sufficient information could not be obtained. Decisions about which houses to leave out were never easy.

In trying to zero-in on the lives of the first owners, it was necessary to rely on secondary sources. Sometimes information could not be cross-checked for verification. Subsequent owners also are mentioned in several cases. Current owners are occasionally quoted but current ownership is not emphasized. For privacy reasons, occupations are not divulged unless they bear in some way on the information being presented. But they run the gamut.

ABELL HOUSE
407 W. Broadway

When they built the ca. 1870s Gothic Revival house at 407 W. Broadway, star-ended ties were used on two levels to prevent the brick walls from developing a fatal spread. Today the oldtimer still looks trim and is getting a facelift including a new wraparound front porch which will be styled after the original.

The Abell House, named after one of its earliest owners, Dr. Daniel T. Abell, is believed to be the oldest surviving house on West Broadway.

Dr. Abell, a Pennsylvanian described in a Pettis County history as an examining surgeon for pension applicants, moved into the house in approximately 1897. After his death in the 1920s, the property remained in the Abell family until 1948.
The original owner has not been identified but may have been John W. Conner, county recorder, who lived in the house until approximately 1887. An old directory indicates that Conner had a maid named Ella Bell who lived in a servant's room above the kitchen. The Abells also employed a maid.

Trying to trace the house's history through its long and complex abstract has been both revealing and challenging to current owners Mr. and Mrs. Ron Sisemore. The abstract, according to Rhonda Sisemore, "reveals scores of mortgages, remortgages, and lawsuits and reads like a soap opera!"

The house has an unusual hipped and gabled roof, three bull's eye windows, a variety of decorative trim including brackets, paneling and fish scale shingles, and (on the east) a double pedimented, three-sided double bay with a square eave highlighted by sunray or fan detailing.

From the front, the house is framed by a pair of giant old basswood trees.

Mrs. Sisemore is a careful restorer. She wants the new front porch to be authentic and hopes to replicate or repair sections of the original veranda, including wooden columns with volutes, which are stored in the backyard.

Interior features include parquet floors, downstairs windows that start low and continue almost to the top of the nearly 12-foot ceilings, and a fireplace with a wooden, columned mantel in the long living room. Upstairs, there's another fireplace and an interesting paneled archway. While repairing the surface of a wall in what had been the library, Mrs. Sisemore discovered remnants of a painted mural depicting the capital and entablature of a very ornate Grecian arch.

A house much like the Abell House occupied the adjacent east lot until a few years ago when it was razed and replaced by a medical clinic.

This house has many similarities to the building at 1609 S. Moniteau Ave. Both were built and lived in by Daniel H. Dean, of the original Dean Brothers Construction Co. (See Inventory Sheets Nos. 101-103.) Both feature full-width front entry porches with decks, hipped-roof dormers, contrasting stone trim, rather wide eaves, etc. But they are far from carbon copies. Among many other things, the West Broadway house is larger!

Daniel H. Dean, the contractor, built this house in approximately 1920 and lived in it for some 40 years before entering a nursing home. Earlier, he built and lived in houses at 1608 and 1609 S. Moniteau Ave. The houses built by the Dean Brothers included the Heard Memorial Clubhouse at 200 W. Broadway. The company, which traces its beginnings back to 1860 when Daniel Dean's father, Frederick George Dean, began building houses in Sedalia. Today Dean Construction Co. specializes in commercial buildings of all types but is still based in Sedalia.

The Harris House was nominated for the National Register of Historic Places in 1979.

Inside, decorative details and expensive touches abound. A different type of wood is used in each of the main floor rooms--oak, cherry, maple and bird's-eye maple. Even such functional items as gas jets, door hardware and bathroom fixtures are elegant and contain decorative detailing. Combination gas and electric ceiling fixtures, no two alike, enhance each major room.

Harris, a Kentuckian, was a latecomer to Sedalia but he quickly made his mark. Already wealthy after spending 24 years in the mercantile and grain business in Pilot Grove, Harris became director of the Missouri Trust Company of Sedalia. In 1902, he was named president of the Third National Bank, a position he held for approximately 20 years until his retirement.

Today, the banker's house is no longer in the Harris family but it remains in "mint" condition.

HEARD HOUSE (FERGUSON HOUSE)
501 W. Broadway

The first thing most people notice about the big white frame house at 501 W. Broadway is the circular front porch that curves around the base of a two-story tower. But the old Queen Anne has many other head-turning features. For instance, there's a highly decorated dormer in the tower's conical roof. On the west, an unusual double bay tapers skyward.

But to Mrs. Kathleen Eichholz, whose husband Garry purchased the house in 1969, the most unique thing is something not so obvious: a landing between the second and third floors where the walls seem to curve away from a "porthole" (actually an oval) window, producing what she describes as a nautical or "riverboat" effect.

"It was designed kind of like a riverboat," Mrs. Eichholz said she was told by a son of Dr. Wilson J. Ferguson, a former owner, who returned with his children several years ago to show them the porthole window.

The house was built in 1891 for John T. Heard, a Congressman who later commissioned what is now the Heard Memorial Club House at 200 W. Broadway. Both houses are in fine, nearly original condition. Heard lived at 501 W. Broadway until approximately 1900.
Ownership changed three or four times until, by 1915, it was the home of Dr. Ferguson. A Kentuckian, Dr. Ferguson was a prominent physician and surgeon in Sedalia and throughout Missouri. In 1904, a locally published biographical sketch said in part: "In 1904 Dr. Ferguson made a trip abroad and took post-graduate courses in the principal hospitals of England, Ireland and France, and putting the finishing touches on a professional education which would seem to most persons to have been already complete. During his career in Sedalia Dr. Ferguson has received many honors at the hands of his professional brethren. He has been president and secretary of the Pettis County Medical Society and a delegate to the state society. Under President Cleveland's administration he was a member of the pension board and is at present examiner for several of the leading life insurance companies."

The next owner was Charles Van Dyne, an ADCO official.

August 11th, 1891

Merritt Yeates

Do hereby certify that I am a practical Surveyor, and that I have made an actual survey of the premises belonging to

James P. Stewart

and described as follows, viz.: East 4 of Block 1, West Broadway Addition to Sedalia, Missouri

That said premises are a part of Block 1, West Broadway Addition, Sec. and situated upon the N.W. 1/4, S.E. 1/4, of Section 45, Township 45, Range 21, and that the improvements are located upon said tract of land as follows, viz.: One two story and basement dwelling house, valued at $7,000 and consists of all as fully drawn and shown upon the foregoing plat.

Merritt Yeates

Surveyor

City Engineer

Sedalia

Inside, two of the four fireplaces have mantels of intricately carved wood. A lion motif is carried out with carved feline heads appearing in a mantel, in four sides of a staircase newel, and in a double stained glass window at the second floor landing. Woodwork and trim throughout much of the main floor features hand-carved detailing. Two rooms are of oak, one is cherry and the living room is a combination of oak and cherry. First floor ceilings are coved: Instead of coming to a right angle, there is a concave zone where the planes intersect.

By 1976, the wooden floor and other parts of the huge circular porch had deteriorated. The porch bed was redone with concrete and bricks, but the original columns with their subtle floral detailing were salvaged. The scallop trim along the upper section of the porch was missing but was reconstructed according to its original appearance on an old photograph of the house from the collection of Mrs. Lillian Wells, Sedalia.

The house apparently was the first built on the south side of West Broadway's 500 block. Its original cost was $7,000, according to a new construction story in the July 3, 1891 issue of The Sedalia Morning Gazette.

HEARD HOUSE
200 W. Broadway

It is entirely appropriate that the copies of Hostess Magazine neatly arranged on an upstairs coffee table are from the 1930s.

The John T. Heard House, 200 W. Broadway, has been essentially "frozen in time" since the death of the late Congressman's wife, Mrs. Lillian C. Heard, in 1934. Congressman Heard died in 1927. Today the house is much as they left it—including twin mahogany "sleigh" beds upstairs, Battenberg lace curtains, and Ionic columns at the north end of the reception hall. Much of the furniture is turn-of-the-century. Everything is so well preserved that it has the atmosphere of a museum.

Yet the house is used by hundreds of people each month, an apparent contradiction. It happened like this:

Upon her death, Mrs. Heard bequeathed the house and its furnishings to Sedalia's two oldest women's clubs, Sorosis and the Helen G. Steele Music Club, for their exclusive use. Each club meets there twice a month. Members are fastidious in their efforts to preserve the mansion and its furnishings. The only significant structural change made by the clubs has been removal of an interior wall between the drawing room and dining room.

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES
   This large-proportioned house features a square-columned central porch with balustraded railing and a smaller, balustraded and columned through-the-cornice porch with a hipped roof directly above. There is a carriage porch on the west with another through-the-cornice, balustraded porch and dormer above it. Exterior chimneys. Flared eaves. #36. Kitchen expanded to include former ice room. Front porch replaced with concrete slab. Steel siding.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
   Built in 1912 for Dr. Everett A. Wood, a physician. A subsequent owner was Pettis County
   Prosecuting Attorney Roy W. Rucker (from approximately 1920-26).
   One of Mr. and Mrs.
   Rucker's two daughters, Jane, married U.S. Senator Alben W. Barkley (D-Missouri), who was elected vice-president of the U.S. in 1948 (as Harry Truman's running mate).
   Subsequent owners have included Todd W. Cloney, Thomas W. Cloney II, and Dr. John E. Lamy.
   Dr. Lamy lived in the house during the 1950s and had a bomb shelter built under the front porch. There is a one-room frame playhouse in the backyard reportedly built by the Ruckers for the pleasure of daughters Jane and Estelle.

44. DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS
   The frame playhouse has wood shingles, a hipped roof and an entry porch. The dimensions are 14' x 22'. (There is a two-car garage under the sunporch on the south side.)
   Residential block within proposed Broadway Historic District.

Two of the three fireplaces have been covered. The remaining fireplace in the living room has a relatively plain but interesting mantel. There are sliding doors between the dining room and a bedroom. Smooth wooden columns between the living room and dining room appear to have been added. The stairway landing apparently has been widened.

Offield, the first owner, was involved in a variety of enterprises: farming, horses, shoes, real estate, groceries and hardware. He built a three-story brick block building which became a grocery store at the northwest corner of Second and Osage, and which he subsequently traded for farmland. Offield platted Sedalia's Dundee Addition.

In 1903, Offield and his second wife, the former Evelyn Jump, had a son they named Lewis Delaney Offield.

Lewis changed his name to Jack Oakie and became a famous actor, a beloved actor actually. He appeared in more than 100 films, often playing college roles and co-starring with actors such as Richard Arlen, Buddy Rogers and Johnny Mack Brown. Oakie's best known film may have been the 1940 classic, "The Great Dictator," in which he played Mussolini to Chaplin's Hitler.

A plaque placed near the sidewalk south of the house by the Pettis County Historical Society reads: JACK OAKIE, INTERNATIONALLY BELOVED MOVIE ACTOR WAS BORN HERE NOVEMBER 12, 1903. Oakie, who left Sedalia as a child after the death of his father, was on hand for the ceremony.

RUCKER HOUSE
509 W. Broadway

From its Texas-sized rooms, wooden columns in the hallway and atomic bomb shelter under the concrete front porch, the big Eclectic Prairie style home at 509 W. Broadway makes a strong first impression. And that's not to even mention its White House connection.

"Some of the house's character seems to rub off on you," said co-owner Mrs. David G. Curry. "You expect something important to happen to you when you live in a house like this."

Originally built in 1912 for Dr. Everett A. Wood, a physician, the house's other owners have included Pettis County prosecuting attorney Roy W.

One of Rucker's daughters, Jane Rucker, became a public figure at the national level. She met and married Alben W. Barkley. Barkley was elected vice president of the United States in 1948, the year Harry Truman defeated Thomas E. Dewey. Barkley, a former Senator, served four years.

The backyard contains what at first glance appears to be either a one-room house or a very fancy shed, but is neither. It's a playhouse given to Jane and her sister Estelle by her father. It contains an iron pipe which Mrs. Curry believes was used as a fireman's pole by the girls.

The house is more sprawling than low-slung, but the effect is definitely Prairie—unless it's Colonial Revival! There are balustraded porches, bays, square columns, a porte cochere, multiple-windowed dormers and an exterior chimney with a flared top. Interestingly, the eaves also are flared.

Structural changes have been few. A pair of round wooden columns, painted white, dominates the spacious main hall. The dining room contains a one-story bay (east side) and wood paneling along the lower half of each wall. The living room (west side) has a brick fireplace painted a shade of white, as has most of the woodwork. On the south (rear) side is a sun-porch over a two-car garage. The kitchen has been expanded to include what had been an ice room. The original wooden porch has been replaced with a concrete slab. Walls are covered with steel siding.

Curry said Dr. Lamy, a survivor of the Bataan death march during World War II, built the bomb shelter. Dr. Lamy, who lived in the house during the 1960s and part of the 1950s, equipped the shelter with a hand-operated ventilation system and fortified it with sandbags, he said.

SCHLONS HOUSE
2402 S. Ohio Ave.

If houses could talk, the owners of the Schlons House at 2402 S. Ohio Ave. figure theirs might explain the tiny secret rooms over the kitchen that only can be entered through a trapdoor in the ceiling.

Although the builder's identity has not been determined, there is good reason to believe the Folk style dwelling was first used as a farmhouse in the 1870s, making it one of the oldest houses in Sedalia. But why would a farmer need a place to hide?

FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES
Symmetrical lines. Full-width single story front porch. French doors at second floor north open onto upper porch deck. Main entrance has sidelights. There are hipped dormers, two chimneys with elaboration (brick) near the tops, square paneled porch supports, decorative shutters, and relatively wide eaves.

HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
This house was used as a rectory by the First Baptist Church from its construction in approximately 1912 through the mid-1950s. Several pastors resided in the house, beginning with Rev. Robert L. Davidson.

DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS
Property is in a residential block on the western fringe of the central Broadway commercial development. It is within proposed Broadway Historic District boundaries.

A basic American foursquare design with a Prairie touch or two (wider than normal--for the period--eaves is a Prairie-influenced element. The original front porch probably was full-width and would have added an impression of horizontality). Steep-sloped dormer roofs are unusual; roof of one-story bay next to driveway also flares. Upper half of main facade is wood shingled. There are modillions along underside of caves.

Charles Van Antwerp, president of the old Monarch Laundry, apparently was the original owner from ca. 1907 until it became the home of Conrad H. Bothwell, cashier at the Sedalia National Bank, in 1914 or 1915. It was the Bothwell home into the 1930s. By 1935, the owner was Karl Leedom.

This may be Sedalia's best example of a Colonial Revival house. The semi-circular entry porch with fluted Doric columns and other classic details under a Palladian window is the dominant exterior feature. There is a square porch with similar detailing on the east. The west side had a similar porch but this has been replaced by a double sunroom addition. Owners have copy of architect Edward A. Strong's original building location.

Interior finished with various types of wood including cherry, oak, and pine. Several upper windows contain leaded glass.

Original owner was Anthony D. Stanley, a newsman who worked his way up to general manager and president of the Sedalia Democrat. Stanley, who is credited with arranging consolidation of the old Sedalia Evening Sentinel with the Democrat in 1907, was president of the newspaper at the time of his death in 1931. House remained in Stanley family until the death of his widow, Alma, in 1943.

Sedalia, Mo.
STANLEY HOUSE
711 W. Broadway

Architect Edward A. Strong's written specifications for the ca. 1905 Stanley House at 711 W. Broadway admonished the plasterers to "leave their work in a first class condition in all respects, without room for exception."

"First class." That was how the Colonial Revival style house was to be built for its first owner, Anthony D. Stanley, a newsman who worked his way up to general manager and president of the Sedalia Democrat.

The specifications, which were "to be thoroughly understood and the spirit of them rightly followed," called for the vestibule and reception hall to be finished in cherry, the parlor in white pine, the south sitting room curly yellow pine, the dining room quarter-sawed oak, the southwest bedroom clear white maple and the northeast bedroom curly yellow pine, with everything else in clear yellow pine. The original roof plans called for red cedar shingles and there was to have been a conservatory.

There was to be "a nickle-plated door bell for the front door, the bell to be furnished with dry battery; provide and set at the front door a push button plate and leave in perfect working order." A call bell was to be installed between the dining room and kitchen.

The current owners, Richard and Paula Clemens, acquired the architect's specifications when they recently purchased the house.

The dominant exterior feature is a semi-circular entry porch with fluted Doric columns, detailed upper railing, dentils and other classic trim under a fine Palladian bay window. A square porch on the east has matching columns, railing, dentils and other trim. The west side originally had a porch but now has a double sunroom addition in its place.

The wide eaves are a Prairie influence shared by several of the post-Victorian Broadway houses.

Two contractors are associated with the house. J. C. Warren is identified as the builder of the "A. D. Stanley residence on West Broadway" in the publication, "Sedalia of Today." However, Mrs. Clemens has evidence indicating that the contractor was Jerome Moyer. Possibly both men were involved in different phases of the project or one may have stepped aside.

Stanley, who is credited with arranging consolidation of the old Sedalia Evening Sentinel with the Democrat in 1907, remained at the helm of the paper until his death in 1931. His wife, Alma, remained an owner and resided at the house until her own death in 1943. Subsequent owners have included Rosemary Burrowes, a former city editor of the Democrat.

STURGES HOUSE
424 S. Grand Ave.

For most of its 100-plus years, the Sturges House at 424 S. Grand Ave. was painted a noncommittal white. Today it's canary yellow with only a dash of white and gray in the trim. This raised a few eyebrows in Sedalia, but to Jack D. and Judy Robinson, it seemed a perfectly respectful way to treat a fine old house.

The Robinsons formerly lived in Atlanta, Ga., a city with many sections where historic houses are practically ubiquitous. There, restorers use a palette with a variety of colors in addition to shades of white and other subdued hues, Mrs. Robinson pointed out.

What can't be denied is that the present combination of colors helps accentuate the mansion's Italianate features, especially the intricately detailed brackets (with pendants) that help support the eaves.

Originally built in approximately 1881, the Sturges House was in the family of Gould Allen Sturges for many years. Sturges and his wife, Margaret, came to Sedalia in the 1860s from Zanesville, Ohio. While the address is not listed in the city directory of 1873, the 1883 directory lists it as the home of Mrs. Margaret D. Sturges, widow. According to Lang, Sturges was a banker who died "a few years after coming here."

Two sons of Sturges, Gould A. Sturges, Jr., and Thomas Jefferson Sturges, established a lumber yard in the 200 block of East Third Street in the 1890s. Known as the Sturges Lumber Co., it became a major source of lumber and other construction materials in Sedalia. In the mid-1940s, the firm changed ownership and became Home Lumber Co.

Features of the house include a double bay on the south facade. The front porch was extended to the south edge and a double bay on the main (east) facade was removed after an attic fire sometime after 1915. The present porch has a large-bladed, vintage ceiling fan. The two-car garage is a converted carriage house.

Classic fluted columns support the full-width front porch. Entry door has sidelights. Modillions adorn cornice of main roof and front porch. Eaves are broad. Lintels and sills are of smooth, contrasting stone. Interesting quoins fashioned of brick accentuate corners. Hipped dormer with triple window in north. Unique bay on west side.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE

This house is virtually a twin of the house at 901 W. Broadway. (See Inventory Sheet No. 82) Both were built in ca. 1912, for brothers Arthur and Sylvain Kahn. Sylvain lived at this address. The Kahns and two other brothers (Albert and Felix) owned and operated the old St. Louis Clothing Co., a four-story brick structure (razed) that occupied the SE corner of 2nd and Ohio. Sylvain was the youngest of the four brothers, who came to Sedalia in 1891 from Alsace-Lorraine by way of Newton, Ks. Sylvain was fatally injured when he was struck by a poultry truck near his home in 1939. The property remained in the Kahn family until mid-1940s.

44. DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS

Frame 13' x 20' garage. Residential block of West Broadway within boundaries of proposed Broadway Historic District.

45. SOURCES OF INFORMATION

   This example nicely illustrates the Victorian penchant for avoiding a smooth-walled appearance. The various facades are highly asymmetrical and the steeply-pitched roof is of irregular shape with a dominant gable facing toward Broadway. L-shaped porch with a deck supported by square, paneled columns. Numerous Queen Anne windows and others with tracery. One-story bay on west. Shutters. #36. One-story addition is apparent on southwestern. Other alterations are probable.
43. HISTORICAL AND SIGNIFICANCE
   An 1896 Sedalia city directory identifies the owner as Adolphus E. Potett, an insurance representative. By 1903, the owner was Dr. Edwin F. Yancey, chief surgeon for the M., K. & T. Railroad. By 1921, Yancey also was president of the Sedalia Trust Co. By 1925, he was medical director. The property remained in the Yancey family until the Exposed rafter ends with decorative notches are a typical feature of Craftsman style. Note band of eight closely-placed dormer windows, accenting horizontal lines. Full-width porch with stone supports on ends only, on south or main facade. Mini-bays on two sides.

First owner apparently was Colby Bloch, a wholesale liquor dealer (Epstein & Bloch). A subsequent owner was Joseph Waddell, secretary-treasurer of the Lamy Mfg. Co. The house was in the Waddell family from the mid-1920s until approximately 1974.

42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES

There is a small balcony-style porch with a pyramidal roof and finial at the SE second floor level. The original wraparound main porch (south to east) has been enclosed and a 10' x 30' addition has been constructed on the southwest facade. Imbricated shingles in gables is a surviving Queen Anne element. One-story bay on east.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE

Frederick C. Crowley, who operated a carriage and buggy manufacturing company in Sedalia, was the owner (or his family) from ca. 1882 through the mid-1890s. Crowley's business, known as F. C. Crowley & Co., was located at 305 W. Main St., with a repository at 215 W. Main St., city directories indicate. Subsequent owners included Lavoise N. Guild, a bookkeeper, for a lengthy period beginning in approximately 1895.

44. DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS

Frame 20' x 30' garage in rear. Residential strip of West Broadway within proposed Broadway Historic District.

The year of construction and the identity of the original owner have not been determined. The address was listed in city directories during the 1890s but the address was not listed in a 1903 directory, indicating that the current house may have been constructed on the site of an earlier house. W. W. Downing was listed as the owner of the house existing in 1898. Andrew J. Bowman was identified as the owner in 1906, and may have been the first. Subsequent owners have included Mr. and Mrs. John W. Baldwin (1913 through 1920). William and Bonnie Wilson bought the house in 1955.

William E. Hurlbut, president of the Sedalia Printing Co., was the first owner. The house remained in the Hurlbut family until the late 1930s. The current owners, Dick and Catherine Van Dyne, purchased the property in approximately 1940.

44. DESCRIPTION OF ENVIRONMENT AND OUTBUILDINGS

Fronts on West Broadway, a high-volume east-west traffic route (U.S. 50). Garage in rear. Property is within boundaries of proposed Broadway Historic District.

Interior remodeling by previous occupants has been extensive. Mrs. Robinson said planned restoration includes removal of a bathroom and closet from the entryway (under the stairs) and removal of gray and white paint from interior paneling "which makes it more Georgian than Victorian."

Incidentally, the house also has a connection with the world of professional golf, Mrs. Robinson pointed out: The genealogy gets complicated, but Gould A. Sturges was the great-grandfather of golfer Tom Watson.

Houses made from ornamental concrete blocks may be following the dodo and gingerbread trim on the road to oblivion. But the old Van Dyne House at 1108 W. Broadway is still going strong and is a convincing example of what could be accomplished when the fake stone was used to dress up the basic American Foursquare.

Built in ca. 1908, the house at first glance appears to be made of natural stone, possibly Warrensburg sandstone which was widely used in public buildings and churches throughout the region before it fell into disfavor. But closer inspection of the blocks shows a few identical "rough cut" patterns repeated over and over, a dead giveaway of concrete.

The ornamental blocks were offered in a variety of finishes as an inexpensive and yet strong alternative to stone and brick, with several companies mass-producing them as early as the 1870s. Finally it even became possible for individuals to buy concrete-block making machines from Sears, Roebuck & Co., and turn out up to 150 blocks a day in their own backyard!60

Today America's automatic machines make concrete blocks cheaply by the millions but they all have smooth faces.

First owned by Mrs. Mary D. Murray, the house was purchased by the J. Rudd Van Dyne Family in approximately 1916. The Van Dynes founded ADCO (American Disinfecting Co.), a manufacturer of dry cleaning products and related chemicals.61 The house remained in the Van Dyne family until the mid-1930s. Current owners are James and Barbara Cooney, who acquired the house in 1961.
The Van Dyne House is like a comfortable World War II era car. In a 1947 Nash, you sat far enough above the concrete to feel elevated. This house does something like that. Not only does it have an abundance of headroom; most old houses do until someone comes along and drops the ceiling. But in this case the design actually makes vertical space the dominant dimension. There's a distinct impression that the house extends upward as much as it spreads outward.

Notice the third floor dormers. They're room-sized. The dormer on the south facade is the largest of three and is enhanced by a Palladian window.

Mrs. Cooney says the qualities she enjoys most about the house are its "airiness, lightness and coziness." She also appreciates the abundance of vertical space and its simplicity.

It's a basic American Foursquare pattern with four rooms on each of two floors, but the impressive dormers and the full porch are touches that set it apart. The three dormer rooms are unused but the first two floors are testimony to Mrs. Cooney's skills as a decorator. The dark and dreary interior the Cooneys first encountered is now "airy, light and cozy."

"I guess houses are a lot like the people who live in them," Mrs. Cooney offered.

The tornado that hit western Sedalia in 1979 came close to undoing Mrs. Cooney's efforts. It ripped out a line of trees on the west side of the house and damaged the roof.

"I had just said, 'I wish I had a new roof.' I've got to be careful what I wish for," she said.

The Van Dyne House marks the westernmost boundary of a proposed Broadway Historic District.

   Emphasis on curved lines and glass. Broad overhanging roof (an alteration from original which had much less overhang), with corrugated edging. Glazed tile walls. Neon wheel "spins" at night above WHEEL INN DRIVE IN neon sign, both in red. Standard horseshoe lunch counter and stools. Originally, there was a large turret-shaped office on top.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE
   Local example of drive-in hamburger restaurant of type which flourished during "cruising" era which began when cars and gasoline became plentiful after World War II. Today Wheel Inn remains much the same as in its heyday, which is recalled in small collection of framed photographs inside. The drive in reportedly sold beer during its early years of operation. Today a specialty is a unique concoction known as the Gooburger, a hamburger with hot melted peanut butter, topped with lettuce, tomato and mayonnaise. The Wheel Inn is one of two vintage Sedalia diners, the other being Eddie's Drive In at 115 W. Broadway (included in previous historic inventory of downtown structures titled "Preserving Historic Sedalia," a 1981 Show-Me Regional Planning Commission survey by Tom Christopher.)

1800 W. Broadway

Sedalia, Mo.
You really need to see it after dark to get the full flavor of the Wheel Inn Drive In, 1800 W. Broadway.

By day, the ca. 1946 Art Moderne restaurant at the intersection of U.S 50 and U.S. 65 looks like a good place to pop in and get a quick hamburger and malted, which it is.

By night when a big red neon wheel "spins" into frantic action above red neon letters spelling out the eatery's name and horizontal bands of brilliant yellow, you almost expect to see an "American Graffiti" crowd of vintage Hudsons, Mercurys, Edsels and Chevys darting in and out of the parking lot.

Thousands of independently owned drive in restaurants much like the Wheel Inn flourished during the "cruisin' 50s" when cars and gasoline became plentiful after World War II. Few have survived into the 1980s. Factors in their demise range from TV dinners to increasing, almost irresistible, competition from an army of franchised competitors.

Architecturally, the Wheel Inn is striking for its emphasis on curved lines and glass. The broad overhanging roof may be considered a practical commercial application of a Prairie style element. Originally, the "wing-span" was much less and there was a small office on top like a giant turret. A small collection of framed photographs displayed inside shows stages in the diner's history.

Today the menu contains the usual assortment of hamburger variations and side dishes plus one specialty known as the Gooberburger. The Gooberburger is "a hamburger with hot melted peanut butter, topped with lettuce, tomato, and mayonnaise. If you like peanut butter," the menu continues, "you will surely enjoy this delicious treat. Our specialty for over 30 years."

Forsaking the practice of a certain fast-food chain, the Wheel Inn has never advertised how many billions of Gooberburgers it has sold.

No one would be more surprised than owners Jack M. and Ruth Ann Hawkins if their restaurant were someday nominated for the National Register. But perhaps even that isn't totally unthinkable. After all, the world's first McDonald's made it. But that happened in California, and everybody knows things are different out there.
