May have been built with 2 front doors, there is only one now. The shutters all appear to be modern. The asbestos siding now on the walls represents a big change to the appearance, but it does appear to be more than 50 years old. The roof features hip dormers on 3 walls, and there is a polygonal window bay on the south wall.
A small, 1 story frame addition to the north includes a small single garage. Parts of the addition could be up to fifty years old.

Early owners, from tax records and other sources

No lot # for this, but it became part of the Christian Church property around 1907.

It is not currently part of the church property.

History and Significance

A history of the Christian Church included in “The First 200 Years”, p. 35, notes that “about 1907, a parsonage was built on the lot that had been purchased behind the church.” That was during the pastorate of Edw. J. Owers, and it was probably his family who first lived there. Earlier Sanborns show a residence immediately east of the church, which probably served as the first parsonage. That house is no longer standing.

See the record for 220 W. Columbia for more information about the church building to the north of this house.

Sanborn Notes:
1900 - not there
1908 in place, dwelling.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

This large brick church is highly intact, especially from the most public view, at Cayce and Columbia Streets. The building has two rear additions, one was added in 1927, and the other was built in 1961. Both have brick walls and lower roofs like that of the original church. The oldest addition has newer 1/1 windows, and the second has narrow, round arched windows set close together. Neither is terribly visible from the front of the church. All major detailing of the main church, including brick walls, limestone accents and art glass windows, is highly intact.

Description of Environment and Outbuildings  No. of Buildings  No. contributing

The church occupies a wedge-shaped lot at the intersection of West Columbia and Cayce, just south of the Presbyterian Orphanage Campus.

Presbyterian Church

ca. 1885

undetermined

Early owners, from tax records and other sources

In 1826, the Presbyterian and Congregation organized the American Home Mission Society, and, in 1830, one of its missionaries, Rev. Mr. J. M. Sadd, came to Farmington and rented a two room log cabin on the square for services. The Farmington Presbyterian Church was organized in 1832. The congregation bought land at Columbia and A Street, and, in 1836, erected a brick church, which was later sold to the Christian Church. They moved to the present location around 1885. ("200 Years, p. 41.")

History and Significance

The Farmington Presbyterian Congregation organized on May 18, 1832, and worshiped in a simple brick church before this one was erected. The original Presbyterian Church was located at what is now 220 West Columbia Street. The congregation sold that building to the Christian Church around 1884, after which this building is said to have been constructed. ("200 Years", p. 41.) In 1903, this building was renovated, and a new organ was installed. Although Sanborns show that it has not changed footprint since 1894, it is likely that exterior detailing was significantly updated during that project. It appears that no exterior changes of note have taken place since then.

A postcard of this church in the Farmington Scrapbook has the following caption: "Present Presbyterian Church 1916." The church in that photo looks the same as it does today. That scrapbook also has a photo postcard of the former church on Columbia Street.

* This property may be eligible as a contributing building within the proposed Presbyterian Orphanage Historic District.

A large, formal building with a two-story main block and one-story side wings. The main block was built in 1939, and the wings were added in 1946. A date stone on the east wall of the main block reads "Presbyterian Orphanage of Missouri 1939". The facade is symmetrical, with a central entrance, small window bays, and large corbeled end chimneys. The front doors themselves are modern; the surround is early or original. The eave line is ornamented with a wooden cornice with small dentils. The detailing of the side wings closely matches that of the original section. There is also a large one story ell centered on the rear elevation.

The campus is located between Cayce Ave and West Liberty Street, just east of Potosi Road. There is a small early 20th century frame garage behind and northwest of this building. It has a gable roof and early or original weatherboard wall sheathing.

Early owners, from tax records and other sources

The orphanage was founded in 1914, when the Potosi Presbytery purchased the property, and in 1917 came under the ownership of both the Potosi Presbytery and the Synod of Missouri. That change meant that it was the only Presbyterian child-care facility in U.S. which was directly related to both the northern and the southern Presbyterian Church, a status it held until the two branches reunited in 1984.

Sanborn Notes for this building:
1952: Administration/ Dining in the rear ell.

History and Significance

The Farmington Children's Home, also known as the Presbyterian Orphanage, was founded in 1914, on the grounds of the former Elmwood Seminary. At that time, the grounds included a large brick administration/classroom building, a smaller house, and a "slave cabin". (200 years, p. 56-57). Those early buildings were gradually replaced with those now on the campus. The buildings now found there were built between ca. 1939 and 1978; four of the five buildings on the campus today are historic, and the nearby Presbyterian Church (ca. 1885) is also highly intact. The orphanage operated into the late 1900s.

The Administration Building is the oldest of the group, and served as an office and dormitory for much of its history. The wings were added ca. 1946, after an earlier building on campus, Butler Hall, was condemned due to concerns over fire safety. Small girls were housed in the south wing, and small boys in the north. The central section held offices. As a group, the buildings on the campus continue to reflect their early history as home to the Presbyterian Orphanage, and appear to be eligible as a National Register District.

This large building sits at the east end of the campus, facing the Administration Building. It is similar to nearby Harlan Hall, which was built about the same time. It has very large paired chimneys in its end walls, and a wide dentiled cornice at the roofline. The tall brick building is one of the larger buildings on the Orphanage grounds. It has a pair of very large corbelled brick chimneys in each end wall, and slightly more detailed brickwork than that of its neighbors. It has rustication along the upper foundation walls and an elaborate dentilled string course at the sill line of the upper windows. Unlike other buildings on the campus, it has two main elevations; the north wall faces Cayce Avenue and the south wall faces the open lawn of the campus. Early owners, from tax records and other sources
This property, which is located along the northern edge of the downtown area, was the property of A. J. Murphy heirs in 1880, and now belongs to the Farmington Middle School.

History and Significance
This is one of the larger intact historic public buildings in the downtown area. The side addition appear to be the only exterior alteration of note that it has seen.

<td>The elaborate cornice of this church is constructed of metal, and the walls have limestone accents, and stucco insets in the brick arcades at the front door and cornice line. There is a huge rose window over entrance - the front doors are new, the openings are original. All art glass appears to be early or original, in blues and purples mostly. The windows are covered with plexi-glass, which has yellowed and become opaque. The tall piers along the side walls have cross patterns in the brick near the roofline, and the exposed rafters have ornamental shaped ends. There is a dentiled brick cornice on the low rear ell, which appears to be original. There is also a large bell tower near the back wall.</td>

The church is located at the intersection of E. Columbia and Long Street. It is highly visible at the east end of Columbia from most of business district in winter. There is a new plaza in front of it. St. Paul’s Lutheran Church is directly east of this.

This church is highly visible from the downtown area, due to its location at the eastern end of Columbia Street. (That location is said to have been dictated by church patron Reinhard Lang, who donated the land upon which it sits.) The building is the largest and most highly styled of the historic churches in the survey group. The first Catholic mass in the area was held in Reinhard Lang's home in 1862, and the local parish was organized in 1869. (200 years, p. 13.) The church building that preceded this one was probably built shortly after that; one post card of this building bore the handwritten note "Built in 1870" (Scrapbook of Farmington Subjects.) The cornerstone for this building was laid on April 28, 1912, and the building was dedicated on October 13 of the same year. It was built by parishioner John McCarthy, later of McCarthy Brothers Construction in St. Louis. The same firm built the present St. Francois County Courthouse in 1927. ("200 Years" p. 42.)

Appears to have been stuccoed (over brick) relatively recently. A newer frame awning with asphalt shingles spans this building next to it. A one story ell joins the two buildings, both of which are two stories tall. The one story section was added about 1907. The building has been extended rearward twice. The first addition, of ceramic tile, was added between 1914 and 1927, and the other, of concrete block, was in place by 1952, per Sanborn maps.

History and Significance

Tax records are inconclusive as to just which of those listed for this lot owned this parcel. The Lorenz family appears to be the most likely. Neither Gossum nor Lorenz were granted a merchants license in Farmington in 1900. The historic name is based upon first known function, from the 1894 Sanborn map. Phillip Lorenz is listed as a merchant tailor in the 1879-1880 Gazetteer. He is listed as a clothier in the 1889-1890 Gazetteer. Jacob Lorenz is listed as a soda water manufacturer in the 1879-1880 Gazetteer. The Bank of Farmington is listed in the 1889-1890 and 1898-1899 Gazetteers. The Bank of Farmington is listed in the 1889-1890 Gazetteer. S.C. Gossom is listed as the owner of Regulator Roller Mills and a general store in the 1889-1890 Gazetteer. Charles E. Barroll is listed as a printer in the 1889-1890 and 1898-1899 Gazetteers.

This two part commercial block has fairly modern stucco - even over the corbeled cornice - red brick is in place below the stucco. A newer frame awning with asphalt shingles spans this and building west of it. A one story ell joins the two buildings, both of which are two stories tall. There is one brick addition to the rear, which was put on between 1927 and 1954; that section is not stuccoed. Some windows have glass blocks, there is ceramic coping along roof, which is early, but probably not original. A large sign on east side wall reads "El Mariachi, Mexican Restaurant."

The upper story of the building looks much as it did in the 1880s, with an elaborate corbeled cornice and segmental arched windows. The window sills and arched window tops look to be sawn granite. There is one early prefabricated iron column on west side of storefront, which otherwise appears to date to around the 1940s. The building does not appear to have seen any changes of note since the storefront was remodeled in the mid-20th century. The west side wall, which overlooks a modern bank building, is faced with newer brick. There is a long rear ell which is also little changed; it has 2/2 windows and most of its walls are brick.

| Tetley Jewelry Store is one of the more prominent and best documented of Farmington's early businesses. The business was established in 1868, but tax records indicate that this building was not here until around 1879. The business was founded by Robert T. and Ann (Gay) Tetley, who raised their children in the residence located in the back part of the building. Their son, George Tetley, took over the business after his father's death, and operated it until his death in 1946. A grandson, Howard Tetley, opened a jewelry store of his own just down the street on East Columbia, and stayed in business until 1977. (200 Years p. 89.)

The Tetley family owned several different parcels of real estate in the downtown area over the years. Robert Tetley is listed as the owner of jeweler and sewing machines in the 1879-1880 Gazetteer. He is listed as a jeweler in the 1889-1890 and 1898-99 Gazetteers.

This building includes 20 and 24 E. Columbia. The upper facade features a sign which reads "Tetley Building A.D. 1912." The building has red brick walls accented with yellow bricks. The lighter colored bricks are used for the corbeled cornice, the panel outlines on the upper facade, and the arches and band along the tops of the windows. The string course at the sill line is red granite. The storefronts themselves do not appear to be original; the openings do. There is a wide steel I-beam over the window openings. The back windows on the bodying have rock-faced granite sills.

History and Significance

When new, this was the home of Thomas Lang's mortuary service, which eventually became Cozean Funeral Home. Cozean is now located on the other end of the business district, on West Columbia. Lang's funeral service had been operating out of Lang and Brother Manufacturing, a wagon making business east of this location. No buildings from that business remain.

Robert Tetley is listed as the owner of jeweler and sewing machines in the 1879-1880 Gazetteer. He is listed as a jeweler in the 1889-1890 Gazetteer.

Robert Tetley's merchant license record for 1901 noted an inventory of $2200. In 1926, it was $5000.

Highly intact upper facade, including a large ornamental arched window in the central bay, and a wide limestone belt course at the tops of the arched windows. The building also has a corbeled brick cornice, and terra cotta molding above the storefronts. Storefronts are filled with wide modern siding and very small windows. The original storefront openings remain intact, however. The side elevation has a similar level of detailing. The rear door and window openings all have semigetal arches and most are intact - most of those on the first floor are filled in, those of the second floor have mostly early 2/2 windows, 1 is a newer 1/1.

This tall brick building has smooth limestone trim, including 2-story tall Ionic columns on facade. A wide, dentiled entablature of limestone runs along the top of the facade. The words “United States Post Office” in gold letters span the upper facade. The front section of the building, which faces north to Columbia Street, is taller than the large rear ell. The rear ell has a couple of infilled window openings and a modern loading dock, the only exterior changes of note. The interior lobby is also little changed, and retains most early woodwork and what appear to be the original mail boxes.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

The building occupies a quarter of the block, and sits back slightly from the sidewalk.

History and Significance

The new Post Office opened in July of 1932, at which time it was said to be one of the most modern mail handling facilities in the area. (200 Years, p. 13.)

In 1927, the Farmington Post Office was located in the building at 102 West Columbia. It is likely that the Post Office moved from that location right into this building.

This building continues to serve in its original function today, and would be individually eligible for its long history as the community Post Office. It is also one of the more highly styled buildings in the downtown area.

George M. Wilson is listed as a lawyer in the 1889-1890 and 1898-99 Gazetters.

Recently rehabbed building is in great shape, and retains basic form and patterns of fenestration. Brick is all in good shape - the bracketed cornice along south and west walls appears to be a recent addition, possibly based upon an earlier element. Second floor windows are new, the openings and sills are early or original - same for storefront clear (glass) awning above storefront and side entrance is modern but of sympathetic scale; it covers part of 103 E. Columbia as well.

The west 1/2 of this building has a storefront and glass awning which matches that of 101 East Columbia in form and apparent age. The storefront on the east half is partly bricked in, with horizontal display windows; it is sheltered by a canvas awning. Upper facade highly ornamented and mostly intact. The window sash on the second floor are new; the original openings are intact. Those openings feature very tall, widely splayed brickwork arches that consist of stacks of two soldier courses. Ornamental string courses along the upper facade are composed of natural finish terra cotta tiles, which are similar to those used on other local buildings of this era. The lower 1/2 of the facade has modern materials. The wide band above the storefront appears to be a surface application only; the storefront is largely new. This is a very deep building, with a newer concrete block addition to the back. Several of the side and rear windows have been infilled.

History and Significance
W.R. Lang’s merchant’s license record for 1901 noted an inventory of $2000. In 1926, the inventory was $2600. It is unclear if that license was for this business.

W. R. Lang was the secretary and manager of Lang and Bro. manufacturing in 1925. Lang and Bro. was one of the largest manufacturing facilities in Farmington through the late 1800s and early 1900s. This is one of few buildings in the survey area to have been associated with the Langs—none of the buildings shown in a historic drawing of that complex survive today. (The complex was located south of on E. Columbia, just west of Main Street.)

W. R. Lang is listed as the owner of Lang and Bro. in the 1879-1880 and 1898-99 Gazetteers.

The storefront is ornamented with square terra cotta accent tiles, which are similar to those found on other buildings in the survey group, including 12 W. Columbia and 111 W. Liberty. (Same architect/builder?)

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

Brick facade has ornamental parapet with dentiled cornice, concrete coping, and inset panels. “Barbara Lee Apts” in letters at top within a brick panel. The double windows on the second floor are ornamented with brick and concrete lintels and trim. They are topped with slatted awnings, which appear to be of metal. The first floor is all or mostly modern and partly infilled with stucco. A large curved metal awning over the storefront represents a major change to the historic facade. There is a one-story rear ell with ceramic block walls and a modern frame facade facing the rear parking lot. The tin ceiling of the ground floor space has an Art Deco style pattern.

History and Significance

This relatively large building is one of few commercial buildings in the survey area to exhibit elements of the Craftsman style. It housed a grocery store early in its history.

Sanborn Notes:
1914 Different building here
1927 This building in place. It had 3 store bays with a one-story open porch at the ground floor.

It was the home to Dicus Drug later in the 20th century.

* This property could be eligible as a contributing building within the proposed East Columbia Street Historic District, especially if the modern hood over the storefront was removed.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

Pressed metal cornice wraps around to side elevation. Facade is tan brick with red brick accents - side is red with tan accents. Glass block in side windows of first floor. Stone window sills appear to be of sawn stone on the facade, and rock-faced on the long side wall, which faces east to Henry Street. The storefront appears to date to ca. 1950 and newer. There is a new stucco or “dryvitt” panel above the storefront.

History and Significance

H. C. Meyer was also the first owner of 120 E. Liberty, (ca. 1919) and Henry C. Meyer is the first known owner of 103 E. Columbia, (ca. 1913) which is just a block east of this one. Henry Meyer is listed as operating a saloon in the 1899 MO Gazetteer, probably in a building at 101 E. Columbia. Louis Miller has been credited as the architect of this building. He was described in a local turn-of-the-century publication as the "largest builder, contractor, and architect in southeast Missouri." He may have designed several of the buildings in the survey area. Emmet E. Swink is listed as the owner of livestock in the 1889-1890 and 1898-99 Gazeteers. Henry Meyer is listed as the owner of a saloon in the 1898-99 Gazette.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

This building includes 120 and 122 E. Columbia. The facade is topped by an elaborate cornice and signboard manufactured by the Mesker Brothers Company, the signboard is blank. The lintels over the windows may be prefabricated as well. The upper window openings on the facade are intact; the shutters flanking them are modern. The back windows have tall segmental arched tops composed of three sailor courses. The bottom half of the facade is covered with new materials; the general storefront openings survive, although all material is newer.

History and Significance
Miss Ida Vollath is listed in the 1898-99 state Gazetteer as a milliner; it is assumed that she occupied the east storefront of this building when it was new. George and Dorretta Vollath's daughter, Lydia, married Charles Giessing in 1901, and soon after built a house for Dorretta Vollath (widowed) on Forster Street, next to his and Lydia's. ("200 Years", p. 172.) Jerry Pogue of Farmington has genealogical information about the Vollath family. ("200 years, p. 218.)

There is a corbeled brick cornice on the facade, which is generally intact. The current storefront looks to be ca. 1950-60 - it features light tan new brick. There is a corbeled brick cornice along the roofline and the segmental arched windows are topped with double sailor courses. The ceramic tile coping at roofline is early, but probably not original. The ca. 1930s rear ell is 2-stories with red brick walls and arched openings like those on the facade. A second floor porch on the back has new vinyl siding, and it also has an open deck.

History and Significance

This building appears to have replaced another harness shop, which was also owned by George Eisenberg. George Eisenberg was listed as a harnessmaker in the 1879-80 and 1888-90 Gazetteers, and John C. Eisenberg was listed as such in the 1899 Gazetteer.

Another listing noted that his business included saddelry, hides, wool, and tallow during the late 1800s. ("200 Years," p. 84.)

The Eisenberg Home was also on this property in the late 1800s.

A simple one-story commercial building with a corner entrance. The large windows have concrete sills and lintels—the fixed sash appear to be modern—the openings are early or original. The lower sections of the exterior walls, below the windows sills, are faced with tan brick, while those above are of red brick. ### History and Significance

This was probably built by W. H. Pirkey right after he purchased the property, sometime between 1927 when the lot was mapped for the Sanborn, and 1930, when the valuation increased.

Thomas Lang was a founding owner of the St. Francois County Electric Railroad Company, which was established in 1901. That company brought the first railroad service to Farmington in 1904, and changed hands shortly after.

Sanborn Notes:
- 1927 Not built
- 1952 there, with 4 long narrow stores fronting on Columbia.

A little-changed oblong box gas station with two service bays and a corner office close to Main Street. It does not appear to have ever changed function. The service bays may have been added after the 1952 Sanborn was made—it is not clear from the map. They do appear to be very close to the same age as the office, if not original.

Ground floor openings have seen some changes, but the general form and overall patterns of fenestration are intact. The west ground floor, which is covered by an awning, is partly infilled with newer windows and a door. The east side of the ground floor has an arched doorway with wood infill and a wide arched window. The opening appears to be early, the window is modern. There is a corbelled brick cornice on the west 1/2 of building. Second floor windows are early or original. Sanborn maps indicate that the east half of the building took its current form ca. 1927--it may have been just a one story building before then.

The bottling business was apparently started by Conrad Market and Fred Schramm, with a later name change to Schramm Bottling-Market appears to have been out of the picture by 1905.

History and Significance
This is the sole surviving resource from what was at one time one of Farmington's largest industries. In 1925, the Schramm Bottling and Creamery Company was described as one of the "largest, best-known and most successful enterprises of its kind in Southeast Missouri." (Homeseeker," p. 3.) At that time, F.W. Schramm was president of the company and C.P. Braun was secretary. The business occupied almost the entire block, and the company's merchant license record for 1926 noted an inventory of $7250.

Conrad Market is listed as the owner of a meat market in the 1889-1890 Gazetteer. He and Fred Schramm joined forces not long after; both are listed as bottlers in the 1898-99 Gazetteer.

The concrete building has three main sections; a two-story center flanked by lower side ells, all built at the same time. The side ells have a very horizontal emphasis, with a wide overhang and short band of windows. A wide set of steps lead to the central entrance from the park on the northeast. The lower ells were built for locker rooms with the reception area in the middle. Large open sun decks top all parts of the building. The sun decks have solid walls on the front (NE) and sides, and open pipe rails on the back, which faced the pool originally. A curved stairway leads from the upper deck down to grade level, at the back.

History and Significance

This is an example of Depression Era work done by the WPA. The pool project began in 1935, and the pool opened on July 4, 1937. Total project costs were $17,993, not counting a wading pool, which was added later. When the pool was new, admission fees ran 10 cents for children and 15 cents for adults, and attendants manned the dressing rooms. ("200 Years" p. 75.)

The pool served the public in Farmington for more than 60 years; it has only recently been replaced by a new facility on the west edge of town.

Today, the pool at this site is gone, and a new skateboard park is in its place; the pool house is largely intact, and back in public service in various capacities.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

This is a very long narrow house, which was added to many times over the years. There are three doors under the side porch, all early, with two vertical panels. Some windows have had muntins removed to form larger openings for the glass. One side porch on the west side has turned spindles. The early weatherboards are exposed on the north end wall, which may have served as the front of the house. The porch on the north end appears to be of mostly modern materials. Posts on the side porch are chamfered, and early or original. One ell on the west is early with a gable roof, and one appears to be later. The later one has a shed roof. The interior of this house has been restored.

Early owners, from tax records and other sources

1833 Phillip Graham Long and Isabella Murphy Long.

Mrs. L. Long on 1880 atlas map. The map shows this house and a spring house.

Later belonged to Mrs. G. H. Bisby (Jane Long)

1927 Mrs. Bisby willed the property to the City of Farmington. (Some accounts say 1921.)

This is one of Farmington's first preservation success stories. When the city announced plans to demolish it in 1951, Florence Hunt Hawn and other members of the local Monday Club worked successfully to change the city's plans, and restoration became a community project. Volunteer work on the restoration was completed in 1954, after which various groups worked to furnish the house appropriately. (200 Years, p. 112-113, 185.)

History and Significance

This house started out as a one or two room log dwelling in 1833. It was built by or for Phillip Graham Long and his wife, Isabella Murphy Long.

The original house was gradually expanded to three main sections, each with a different staircase, plus a kitchen, and later the entire building was clapboarded.

Two of the three main sections are of log; one is frame. It appears that the original house is in the center of the present building. The house remained in the family of the original owners until the 1920s, when it was willed to the City by Mrs. Jane (Long) Bisby, the same woman who built Long Memorial Hall, which is now the Farmington City Hall.

Under city ownership, this house was used as a park superintendent's house and, during WWII, as a nursery for working mothers. It later was converted to use as a public meeting and event facility, a function it has today.

The building has four nearly identical elevations, each with a projecting 2-story Corinthian colonnade and arcaded upper section. Identical clocks are set in the parapets above the colonnades in each elevation. Each elevation has the words "St. Francois County Court House" carved into the stone below the clock. Most of the windows are modern, but similar to original; openings are unchanged. The basement windows may be original. Engaged Corinthian columns run between the window bays on all four walls. Medallions between the 1st and 2nd story windows have a flower ornament that looks like a stylized dogwood blossom. The interior is highly intact.

St. Francois County Courthouse

Early owners, from tax records and other sources

St. Francois County, 1820s to present.

This is the fourth courthouse to grace this site. The first was completed in 1823, by builder George Taylor.

The next was built around 1848, from plans drawn by Henry H. Wright, an architect living in St. Louis at the time.

The third courthouse was built in 1885, from plans drawn by Jerome B. Legg, also of St. Louis. (Legg is also believed to have been the architect for 102 West Columbia, which is directly southwest of the courthouse.)

* This property may be eligible as a contributing building within the proposed Courthouse Square Historic District. The courthouse is the largest high style building in the downtown area today.

History and Significance

In 1926, work began on this building, which was designed by Norman B. Howard, of the St. Louis architectural firm Bonsack and Pierce.

The contract for construction of this courthouse was awarded to the McCarthy Construction Co. in 1926, and the courthouse was dedicated on October 13, 1927. (Ohman.)

It has served continually as the county courthouse since that time.

McCarthy Construction also built St. Joseph's Catholic Church, at Long and E. Columbia, in 1912.

Howard's work on the courthouse drew some criticism for lack of originality—his first design concept is said to have looked too much like the Franklin County Courthouse. This represents a later version of the design. (The four equal entrances are said to have been designed to avoid having any business face the back of the courthouse.) There also was an apparent community interest in the use of local red granite for the building. Howard must have won that argument, as the final bid documents called for Bedford limestone and Carthage marble. The limestone was used on the exterior, and the marble for the stairs and wainscoting inside.

- 1920 O.F. and W.H. Rotger E 1/2 Lot 58 $3040

History and Significance

This site was owned and occupied by the Rotger family for decades. They apparently owned another building on this lot, which they occupied before this was erected in the early 1900s. A description of the town as it was in 1891 described "Rotger's Bakery run by Mr. Rotger and his son, Otto, where you could buy a delicious loaf of bread 5 cents per loaf... Next was Will Rotger's Harness Shop where you could buy anything to dress up your horse." ("200 Years", p. 10.)

O.F. Rotger, who appears to have built this building, was probably Mr. Rotger's son, Otto, described above. W.H. Rotger is listed as a baker in the 1879-1880 and 1889-1890 Gazetteers. W.H. Rotger is listed as a harnessmaker in the 1898-99 Gazetteer. O.F. and W.H. Rotger's merchant license record for 1901 noted an inventory of $550.

This building includes 16 and 18 W. Columbia. This large business block has recently been rehabbed and is in excellent condition. The walls of the main block are of tan brick, and the ornamental cornice is of red brick, with natural terra cotta accent trim. The walls around the arches are of smooth limestone panels. The columns at the corner entrance are of polished red granite. All or most original patterns of fenestration are fully intact. Most second floor windows are new, but match two older ones located on the west wall. There are segmental arched, 6/6, windows in rear; some early or original, some new; canvas awnings cover the rear ground floor windows.

History and Significance

Farmer's Bank was organized in 1904, and apparently started construction on this building soon after, as tax records and Sanborn maps indicate it was completed by 1906 or 1907.

The bank was described in a 1925 promotional publication thus: "The bank occupies the ground floor of its own substantial brick building, which is situated on the southwest corner of the Square. The officers are P.A. Shaw, President; G.B. Snider, Active Vice-President; W.C. Fischer, Vice-President; and L.H. Williams, Cashier." That business apparently fell victim to hard times of the Great Depression; in 1933 the United Bank of Farmington was formed to replace what one historical account called "the defunct Bank of Farmington and the Farmers Bank." ("200 Years", p. 13.)

This building is undergoing a full rehab. A large corner entrance is flanked by storefront windows, which face Columbia and Jefferson streets. The front and east side elevations have a very elaborate corbeled brick cornice, one of the most ornate in the downtown area. Those walls also feature red granite accents, including small brackets under the window sills. The prefabricated cast iron columns at the storefront have Corinthian capitols. The early balcony, which faces Columbia, has an ornamental cast iron railing. A one-story side ell on the west side of the building is of red brick; it was added after 1927, and appears to be just over fifty years old. The second floor has 16 foot tall ceilings.

Carl Braun operated a hotel, saloon, and opera house here until around the turn of the century. It was home to the Farmington Post Office by 1927. The Post Office moved to a new location down the street in 1932, after which this building was purchased by a group of local area businessmen for office use. Ozarks Federal Savings and Loan bought it in 1933 and occupied it for the next 37 years.

* This property may be eligible as a contributing building within the proposed East Columbia Street Historic District. It may also be individually eligible as an intact early Opera Hall and Hotel. It is the only Opera Hall known to have ever been located in Farmington.

History and Significance

This building has many similarities to the 1884 St. Francois County Courthouse, which Legg is known to have designed. It is very likely that he did the plans for this building as well. An early photo of the building shows the words “Braun’s Hall 1884” spelled out in large block letters at the north (front) cornice line. Most of those letters were recently found inside the building.

A 1932 newspaper article noted that the new owner at the time were planning to remodel the facade to fit the new office use; it has been assumed that the storefronts were installed at that time. The next owners, Ozarks Federal Savings and Loan Association, painted the exterior white. That paint was removed at an unknown date.

This is the oldest intact frame commercial building in survey area. Pedimented roof at front, and the wood storefront are highly intact and in good shape. The walls are sheathed with early or original weatherboards, and the 9/9 windows and their shutters also appear to be original. There is a small one story frame addition with a shed roof and vinyl clad walls on the back wall. The building just west of this one was part of this property for decades; they now house separate businesses. One or two of the window openings on the east side wall have been filled with wood panels; the openings themselves are intact.

* This property may be eligible as a contributing building within the proposed East Columbia Street Historic District. It may also be individually eligible as the oldest intact frame commercial building in the downtown survey area.

History and Significance
This building appears to have been in place by the time of the 1877 tax assessment. There was a building at this location when the 1880 atlas map was made, although it had a slightly different footprint than this one. This is best known as the Gierse tailor building, a function it had for decades. Several local historical accounts note that Gierse began his business in 1882. Deed records show that Gierse bought this property from Weber in 1884. It seems likely that Weber built this and leased it to Gierse for a few years, or Gierse may have started out at a different location. John A. Weber is listed as the owner of a general store in the 1879 - 1880 Gazetteer; that business may have been in this building as well. The second floor is said to have been used for public gatherings under Gierse's ownership. ("200 Years" p. 10.)

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations
This building was added to the side of Gierse's Tailor's Shop (104) sometime before 1894 and was part of that property until sometime after 1953, per Sanborn Maps. It now houses a separate business. Historic photos and Sanborn maps show that this had weather boarded walls to begin with, and brick veneer was added between 1894 and 1908. The storefront is all modern - probably over the original opening. The back wall is white-painted brick, with one flat and one arched window opening. The east side is attached to 104; the west side wall faces a narrow walkway to the back of the lot. That side wall is of brick, with six segmental arched windows, and one doorway.

History and Significance
This building was added to the large frame commercial building next to it in the late 1800s, and received a brick veneer in the first decade of the 20th century. It was occupied by the Gierse business for decades.

Frank Gierse's merchant license record for 1901 noted an inventory of $900. Frank Gierse is listed as a merchant tailor in the 1889-90 Gazetteer, and simply a tailor in the 1898-99 edition. A profile of his business also appeared in "A Message to the Homeseeker, a promotional pamphlet printed in 1925

Long Memorial Hall was built for Mrs. Jane (Long) Bisby, in memory of her brother, Dubart Long. Mrs. Bisby also willed the Long House and surrounding land to the city. That parcel is now Long Park, which includes the restored Long House and the former Pool House, now a skate park.

Long Hall was built in 1924, and first served as a community center of sorts, housing the public library, a bowling alley, an auditorium and a dance floor. The library occupied two rooms in the building from the time it opened in 1924, until 1980, when the current library building at 108 Harrison Street was built. Long Hall later became the Farmington City Hall, a function it still serves.

The building is one of the largest styled historic buildings in Farmington today. Although an architect has not been linked with this building, the design is almost surely the work of a professional. It is highly intact and in very good condition.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations
Although altered, the basic form is intact. The second floor window openings appear to be original, although the windows themselves probably are not. The ground floor of the facade has seen several changes over the years, and little evidence of the original configuration remains. Some openings have been fully filled in, and others have glass block infill. The stucco may be newer. There is a large open side porch of frame, which is fairly early, but not original. A rear addition of concrete block. There is a secondary entrance and a stair to the second floor on the west wall.

Adam Niedert started out as a woodworker, and became an undertaker. (That was a common pattern of business development at the time; many early undertakers started out as furniture makers.)

Niedert is listed as a wagonmaker in the 1889-1890 Gazetteer, and as an Undertaker and Embalmer in the 1898-99 entry. His advertisement in the later Gazetteer noted that his business specialized in "telegraph orders". He remained in business here for several decades; his merchant license record for 1901 noted an inventory of $300. By 1926, it had grown to $1500.

The other side of the building was occupied by the complementary business of a gravestone and monument maker. That business was run by John Spaugh throughout the 1890s. ("200 Years", p. 11, and Gazetteers.)

A large stone church, with a cross-gabled roof. The walls are of dark tan limestone, which is similar to that used on the ca. 1871 St. Francois County Jail that sits just north of the church. The gable ends are filled with slate shingles. The corner stone reads: “Christian Church est. 1853”. Wide concrete steps lead up to a small bracketed hood over the front door. The doorway, like the stained glass windows, has a gothic pointed-arch top. The windows all appear to be original. A painted foundation and siding on the large bell tower are among the few changes of note. Several of the basement windows are partly filled in.

History and Significance

The Farmington Presbyterian Congregation organized on May 18, 1832, and worshiped in a simple brick church at this location until around 1884, when they sold it to the Christian congregation.

This building, which was dedicated on April 7, 1901 replaced that one. The Christian congregation worshiped here until 1950, when they moved out of this building to the former Methodist Church building at 211 W. Columbia. The house south of this was built to serve as the parsonage around 1907.

A historic postcard of this church in an early scrapbook shows that it has seen no changes of note in the last century.

History and Significance
This was probably the office of Dr. E. C. McCormick. Sanborns show that it was originally located near the road, next to the house, and was moved to this spot between 1914 and 1927.
Ms. Julia Menge remembers his house and office in this location in 1891 ("200 Years", p. 9-10.)
Dr. E.C. McCormick's merchant license record for 1901 noted an inventory of $1000.
Dr. E.C. McCormick was a founding owner of the St. Francois County Electric Railroad Company, which was established in 1901. That company brought the first railroad service to Farmington in 1904, and changed hands shortly after.

History and Significance

This was McCormick's house; his office was in a small building next to it, probably the one now near the back of this lot, at 206 W. Columbia.

Dr. E.C. McCormick's merchant license record for 1901 noted an inventory of $1000. He is listed as a physician in the 1889-1890 and 1898-99 Gazetteers.

McCormick was a founding owner of the St. Francois County Electric Railroad Company, which was established in 1901. That company brought the first railroad service to Farmington in 1904, and changed hands shortly after.

A.J. Leathers is listed as the owner of a general store in the 1879-1880 and 1898-99 Gazetteers.

This house is, or was, a near-twin to the house east of it, at 208 W. Columbia. It is likely that they were built about the same time, possibly from the same set of plans, and by the same builder.

History and Significance
C. S. Fitz was the owner of Fitz Chevrolet Company in 1939; this may have been part of that operation. He also owned auto-related buildings in the 100 block of North Washington Street.
Fitz was described in the 1939 account as “one of the most alert and progressive men that Farmington has ever had.”
That description also noted that he bought the business in 1936, and that by 1939, it included “a modern service department with factory-trained mechanics of the highest ability.” (“200 years, p. 86.)

History and Significance
Local history holds that this house was built ca. 1838, to serve as the "manse" for the Presbyterian Church, which was built across the street at 220 W. Columbia in 1831. That church was replaced with the present Christian Church in 1901.

Mrs. Wilson, who lived there in the late 1900s, was a photographer who took tintypes. She is listed in the 1889-1890 and 1898-99 Gazetteers as a photographer. A description of the area as it appeared in 1891 includes a mention of Mrs. Wilson. ("200 Years," p. 10.)

The church has a high level of finish on all four walls, and is highly intact. The covering of the belfry with plywood is the only recent exterior change of note. There is a raking dentiled cornice along the wooded trim of the gable ends, and the flat cornice line of the bell tower has matching dentiled trim. The walls are of red brick, and the stone is rough cut red granite. All or most of the early stained glass windows are intact. Most openings have round arched tops—the larger of the window openings have round tops with pointed-arch muntin patterns within. A flat white marble date stone above the front door reads "Christian Church 1900". (The building was dedicated in 1901.)

History and Significance

The Farmington Presbyterian Congregation organized on May 18, 1832, and worshiped in a simple brick church at this location until around 1884, when they sold it to the Christian congregation.

This building, which was dedicated on April 7, 1901 replaced that one. The Christian congregation worshiped here until 1950, when they moved out of this building to the former Methodist Church building at 211 W. Columbia.

The house south of this was built to serve as the parsonage around 1907.

A historic postcard of this church in an early scrapbook shows that it has seen no changes of note in the last century.

This two story gabled ell was probably a near-twin to the house at 208 West Columbia when new. It has seen much alteration, including a large one-story front addition of brick, which appears to date to ca. 1960 or 70. The house now has modern plywood siding on the north and west walls, and new brick on south and east walls. The gable roof has flared eaves and wide cornice returns.

History and Significance

A. J. Leathers and James Elgin owned a general store in 1879, and Leathers was in business solo by 1899, according to Gazetteers.

This house is, or was, a near-twin to the house east of it, at 208 W. Columbia. It is likely that they were built about the same time, possibly from the same set of plans, and by the same builder.

Sanborn Notes:
There from 1894 on.

This large concrete block building was built ca.1929. The brick facade may be much newer. The symmetrical facade has a wide central doorway flanked by large openings, which may echo the original fenestration patterns. The arches above the doors and windows are probably modern, as are the doors and windows themselves.

History and Significance
The jump in valuation by 1940 indicates this was built by that time. The fact that Sala Evans was penciled in, in 1930 indicates a recent purchase, and it would be logical to assume the building was erected not long after the land changed hands.

There is a wide band of early or original fish scale shingles between the two floors of this house. The other walls have wide masonite siding. The 1/1 window on the facade is newer, as are the porch posts on the side porch. The front porch has a small gable roof which may be newer, and turned posts which may be early. The front porch is not shown on the 1908 Sanborn map of the house; the side porch is. A window bay on the west wall is early or original. The front door appears to be early, it has a large oval light. There is a one story rear ell with a concrete block foundation, and a set of stairs on the east wall that lead up to the second floor. This appears to be used for apartments now.

History and Significance

There is a building on this lot on the 1880 atlas map; this house is not that old. Sanborn maps do show that it has seen few changes or major additions to the footprint since it was built in the early 20th century.

Henry Shaw is listed as a barber in the 1889-1890 Gazetteer.

The prominent corbeled brick cornice of the facade extends along the side walls too. This is the only house in the survey group to have a corbeled brick cornice. The cornice features triangular pendants of brick and a high relief. The 1908 Sanborn map of this house shows that the front porch originally wrapped around to the west side also. The one story side ell, now on the west side, is modern. There is a large polygonal bay on the east, which is early or original. A one-story rear ell is early, not original. This house has one of the most elaborate brick cornices found on any of the survey properties, residential or commercial. The cornice is very similar to that seen on a historic photo taken of the Baptist College building in 1896. ("200 Years," p. 46.) This may be the work of the same mason.

Not shown on the 1880 atlas map; Victorian styling and construction details indicate a late 19th to early-20th century construction date.

This is one of the most intact houses in the downtown area. It appears to be freshly painted and is in good shape. History and Significance

Henry Kohlmeyer and Adam Niedert are listed as partners in a wagonmakers' business in the 1889-1890 Gazetteer. It is possible that this house was built by Adam Neidert, and that lot numbers for lots 5 and 6 were switched in the tax assessment records for 1883. It has been attributed to Kohlmeyer, since he is known to have owned it for several years when it was new. Since the men were business partners around this time, chances are they both worked on the construction.

Adam Neidert later became a undertaker, with a shop at 115 West Columbia. Kohlmeyer is not listed in the 1899 Gazetteer, he may have passed away by that time.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations:
This is a large factory complex, which consists of three main sections that span a full block. The oldest section is on the west. It was built in 1932 and is 2-1/2 stories tall with 13,000 sq. ft. per floor. That section also has an attached boiler room on its southwest corner. All of the walls there are of brick, with early or original wood windows. The center section was added in 1952, it is one story tall with 6,500 sq. ft. of floor space. It has the same type of brick walls and wood windows as the original section. The third section, added in 1962, is on the east. It was built in 1962. It is one story tall, with stuccoed walls and 25,000 sq. ft.

Early owners, from tax records and other sources
The plant was built for the Rice-Stix Dry Good company and was later (after 1952) run by the Puritan Company. In the late 1960s, it became home to the Builtwell Company.

It has recently been rehabilitated, and now houses "The Factory", a multi-function commercial enterprise that includes a restaurant, retail, and meeting spaces.

History and Significance
The factory was built as an early community sponsored economic development project. A plaque on the north wall of the oldest portion of the building reads:
"Sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and Erected by the People of Farmington 1932"
The construction was the result of a fundraising drive begun by the Chamber of Commerce in 1931.

In 1943, the Rice-Stix Factory received the coveted Army-Navy "E" flag.

This building has seen very few changes of note since it was completed and it is the only large scale historic manufacturing facility in the commercial core of Farmington.

The jail was built in 1870-71, and enlarged slightly around 1909. The building sits close to the sidewalk. The narrow building is three bays wide, and the arched front doorway is centered at the ground floor. A carved datestone sits directly above the door. The lettering on the datestone stone is carved into a smooth oval section centered in a wider wall block. The date 1870 is centered in the oval, and is flanked by credits for the builder, John Emerlauer, and the construction superintendents, W.M. Carter and L. D. Walker. The upper walls of the building are of brick and the lower walls are constructed of rock-faced limestone blocks. It is currently vacant, and several windows have recently been broken out.

Early owners, from tax records and other sources

The building sits on a lot that has been occupied by St. Francois County jails since 1824.

The building was built to house the St. Francois County Jail in 1870-71, and it remained in continual operation as a jail for over 125 years.

* This property would qualify as a contributing building within the proposed Courthouse Square Historic District.

History and Significance

The St. Francois County Jail is significant under Criterion A in the area of LAW ENFORCEMENT, and under Criterion C, in the area of ARCHITECTURE. It is one of the oldest operating county jails in Missouri, and it appears today much as it did during the period of significance. The building was designed to serve as both jail and sheriff's residence, following a common practice for small county jails throughout Missouri. It served that dual purpose throughout the period of significance; the sheriff's family occupied the second floor and the ground floor housed the jail. The building is also significant as an architect-designed building, which included many "modern" amenities not commonly found in Missouri county jails at the time of its construction. The plans and construction specifications were prepared by Charles H. Pond, an architect who practiced in St. Louis for more than thirty years. The mechanical systems called for in Pond's plans were technologically advanced for jails of the early 1870s and included a central heating system and indoor plumbing for the cells.

Squared wall stones of red and gray granite with raised flat joints; some joints are dark and some are yellow. A stone fireplace on the north has the same type of stone work. There is a garage in the basement to the north. The large gabled dromer on the front wall has a stone veneer on its front wall. The full front porch has stone walls for railings, with ornamental arched openings in the base of the walls for drainage. The front door is arched, with a round light; it is early or original. A small three-sided window bay is located on the south wall.

This simple rectangular building has seen no enlargements or changes to its form, but does have new fenestration. The large open bays in facade have been partly bricked in and now have small modern windows. (They were probably garage type doors when this was the home of the fire department.) The central doorway may be original; the door itself is modern. The side wall has regularly spaced piers and early window openings, which contain newer window sash.

The windows of the church are a vernacular adaptation of the Gothic style. They are geometrical versions of the classic pointed gothic arch, with all straight framing members. The top sash of the double hung windows have triangular tops, with straight muntins, which continue the Gothic theme. The louvered opening of the bell tower and the front door surround have similar triangular tops. The corners of the building are accented with narrow pilaster corner boards, and there is a wide flat trim board at the water table. The roof line is accented with a wide flat cornice board. A shed-roofed side addition on the southeast rear corner, is part older and part newer.

This is a late version of a two-part commercial block, one of the newest in the area. It was probably built by Walter Smith, who bought the auto repair shop at 110 S. Jackson between 1940 and 1950. Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

This is a late 19th century house with a ca. 1930 front porch. The porch has Craftsman style piers and posts; the roof is probably original. Wide modern siding covers all other exterior woodwork. There is a gable hood on the west side elevation that is supported by large brackets. The hood may be slightly newer than the front porch posts.

History and Significance
This is one of only a dozen survey properties shown on the 1880 Atlas map.
Seward Burke is listed in the 1979-1880 Gazetteer as a constable, and as an insurance man in the 1889-1890 edition.
Thomas Stam is listed as the county clerk in the 1889-1890 and 1898-99 Gazetteers.
Mary (Callaway Hunt) Stam and her husband, John Stam (b. 1821), had eight children, including Mary Jane (b. 1856), who later became Mary Jane Burke, presumably Seward Burke’s wife. If so, the division of the property in the late 1870s kept it in the family. (200 years, p. 238.)

The building has red brick walls on the facade and tan brick elsewhere. The stepped parapet along the facade has ceramic tile coping, as do the side parapets. The storefront openings are largely intact, although the area around the doorway has been partly infilled. There is one newer window in the back wall and glass block infill in some of the side windows.

History and Significance

C. A. Tetley may have been Clarence Tetley, who was a dentist, and served as mayor of Farmington from 1919 to 1934. Clarence, the son of Robert and Ann Gay Tetley, was instrumental in bringing the Rice-Stix Factory and, therefore, many jobs to the community in the 1930s. He owned several parcels of land downtown in this general time period, including a row of commercial buildings around the corner to the northwest, on Jackson Street. (200 years, p. 243.)

This is a long L-shaped frame building, which sits about 2 feet above the ground on rows of square concrete piers. There are four rows of piers in each ell. There are a few small windows on the rear section, which are boarded over. The building also has several large sliding wooden doors, located on both the front and rear sections.

One of oldest and most intact small houses in survey area. The front porch has Craftsman piers and posts; it was added between 1914 and 1927, per Sanborn maps. The central entrance way has a full door surround with small rectangular lights, and very simple Greek Revival styling. There is a small side gabled ell on the west wall of the house; it sits back from the facade. The central cross gable and a pair of pilasters near the front door are probably left from a porch, which Sanbors show to have been added around 1900. The house has a very long rear ell which is early or original.

History and Significance

Weber also owned property on West Columbia about the time he owned this lot. He may have been the builder of the shop Fank Gierse later occupied, at what is now 106 W. Columbia. This house appears to have been in place since before 1894, when it was first mapped by the Sanborn company.

This house could be individually eligible as a rare example of an intact early residence within the Original Town of Farmington. It may also be significant for its association with the Weber family.

John A. Weber is listed as the owner of a general store in the 1879-1880 Gazetteer.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

Appears to have started as a side-gabled house with a front cross gable and possibly a wrap-around porch. The porch now closest to the house appears to date to the 1940s. The very front porch, of plywood, is a recent addition. The house has ornate stamped metal shingles on the roof and in the gable ends. There is a small modern addition to the rear, as well as a large fireplace, which is relatively new.

A modern garage sits behind the house to the east, near the street.

History and Significance

Emma Boswell and her brother Edward Helber operated a hardware store south of this building from the late 1890s to modern times. (101 E. Liberty.) Katherine Helber may have been their mother or related in some other way. The merchant license record for Bowell and Helber in 1926 noted an inventory of $3500.

E.A. Helber is listed as owner of a hardware store in the 1898-1899 Gazetteer.

Sanborn Notes:

- 1908 Sanborn, not there
- 1914 In place, with "iron clad gables".

Looks older, but Sanborn maps and a jump in valuation between 1910 and 1920 indicate this construction date.

This small commercial building is attached on the south to a row of three similar buildings. It is longer than they are, with slightly different detailing. The storefront is sheltered by a small shake covered shed roof. Some of the north side windows are filled with glass block of indeterminate age. The back door has a single light with one panel below. The roof parapet has ceramic tile coping.

History and Significance

C. A. Tetley may have been Clarence Tetley, who was a dentist, and served as mayor of Farmington from 1919 to 1934. Clarence, the son of Robert and Ann Gay Tetely, was instrumental in bringing the Rice-Stix Factory and, therefore, many jobs to the community in the 1930s. He owned several parcels of land downtown in this general time period, including the buildings to the south of this one and the lot and building at 107 East Harrison, which is just around the corner to the southeast. The three sections are joined and appear to have all been built at the same time. Each unit has an early or original storefront, with one large light topped by low tow-light transoms. The shed awning is supported by large shaped brackets, all appear to be original. The trio of gable roofs also appear to be early or original. The rear gable ends have asbestos siding; those on front have newer flat siding. There is a shed-roofed frame addition on one rear section, and the side and back walls have different brick than that used on the front. The facade brick is tan, the other is reddish. There are two side windows/wall openings with air conditioners in them, and one larger side window which is covered over.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations
This is a ca. 1879 house, which was added to and converted to commercial use around 1907. The house faced Harrison; the cross gable in the current facade was a side gable end for the house. The commercial remodeling added to the northwest corner and an entrance there. (That door is now a window.) The building is now entered on the west elevation. The early gable end retains wide cornice returns and early narrow weatherboards, and the same type of weatherboards are visible on the back wall. Most of the other walls have modern sheathing. A long shed-roofed porch extends across part of this facade and links this building to the one just south of it, at 110 S. Jackson.

History and Significance

This is one of only about a dozen buildings in the survey group to have been built by the time the 1880 Atlas map was made. It began as a house and was apparently converted to commercial use around 1908. Later, in the early 20th century, the building south of it was built and the two were connected with a shed roofed awning.

Alvin Rucker is listed as the owner of a general store and drugs in the 1879-80 and 1889-90 Gazetteers. He is listed as a druggist in the 1898-99 Gazetteer.

Sanborn Notes:
- 1894 T-Shaped house with open front porch facing Harrison.
- 1900 Same
- 1908 Close to its present form - appears to have been converted from existing house into "Marion Smith Machine Shop", with a corner entrance. Still dwelling in rear
- 1914 Storage of Wagons and Implements
- 1927 expanded some. "S"

This building shares a low shed roofed porch with the one to the north, at 102 South Jackson. The roof of that porch, which appears to be early, is set beneath a second shed roofed awning which appears to be original to this building. One story shed roofed ell on the rear is early or original. A small cupola is centered on the roof, which is tin. A large sliding metal door is located near the rear end of the main section. The lower facade has a central entry flanked by large 2/2 wood windows.

History and Significance
This is a relatively late example of an agricultural processing facility in the town center. It was not there when the Sanborn was made in 1927, but does appear to have been built by 1930, when the assessment for the lot was twice what it had been a decade earlier.

Jeff McDowell's merchant license record shows that he had an inventory of $300 in 1925.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

The building sits up on concrete piers. It originally had an awning porch like the one on 110 S. Jackson -- slanted rafters that extend out from the surface of the facade have been cut off. The front door is newer, the opening early or original. Some windows are covered, the one on the facade is modern. There is a small brick chimney on the front part of the north side wall. The tin roof and wall sheathing appear to be early or original.

Newly rehabbed and very intact inside as well. Highly intact second floor and newer though sympathetic storefront. The new wood storefront has large display windows with transoms above and bulkheads below. The north side elevation, which faces Columbia St., has the same type of Mesker Brothers prefabricated cornice used on the facade. The side windows on the second floor are like those on the facade, while the first floor side wall has shorter openings, set high in the wall. There is a large frame second floor porch on the back of this and the building to the north. Painted letters across the upper facade of this and 3 N. Although Sanborn maps seem to indicate that this building replaced a similar one in the late 1890s, it may have been here since before the 1894 Sanborn. Form and fenestration seem to indicate the earlier date. The cornice may have been added later.

* This property may be eligible as a contributing building within the proposed Courthouse Square Historic District.

History and Significance
M.P. Cayce is listed as the owner of a general store in the 1879-1880 Gazetteer. This building was probably built by or for M. P. Cayce, and owned next by Simon Jacobson. Jacobson is listed as the owner of a general store in the 1879-1880 and 1889-1890 Gazetteers. (He may have been renting this space from Cayce in 1879.) A description of the town as it appeared in 1891 noted that Jacobson’s store was at this location then. (*200 years, p. 11.)

Adam Neidert is listed as an undertaker and embalmer in the 1898-99 Gazetteer. The building may be best known for its association with Morris Brothers General Store, which opened at this location around the turn of the century. A ca. 1910 photo shows that by then, the Morris Brothers occupied this and the two storefronts to its north, and the facade still bears painted letters which spell out their name. (200 Years pp 2-3.) J.M. Morris’ merchant license record for 1901 noted an inventory of $4500. In 1926, the inventory was $1000.

History and Significance

J.F. Puttman's merchant license in 1901 noted an inventory of just $50. Morris Brothers probably took over this space shortly after that, renting from Puttman. A ca. 1910 photo shows that by then, the Morris Brothers occupied this and the storefronts on either side, and the facade still bears painted letters which spell out their name. (200 Years pp 2-3.) J.M. Morris' merchant license record for 1901 noted an inventory of $4500. In 1926, the inventory was valued at $1000.

An ad taken out by Morris Brothers in the 1912 SE Missouri Drummers' Association Convention program read: "BOYS: On your arrival in Farmington call at our store for your White Negligee Shirts for the Dress Parade. Our store is headquarters of the Official Negligee Shirt for the Parade." (Beal, p. 300)

The upper story of the facade is highly intact; the ground floor is all new, although the general openings are intact. The widows of the second floor have high round arches with raised molding, which look much like those on the building to the south, 3 N. Jefferson. The facade is painted white at the second floor, and a wide band of newer tan material runs above the new storefront and flat awning. The prefabricated bracketed cornice at the roofline is a Mesker Bros product.

History and Significance
Although the valuation for this had not yet increased for the 1900 tax assessment, this building did show up on the 1900 Sanborn; hence the ca. 1899 construction date. This building is very similar to 3 N. Jefferson, just south of it, and it has been assumed they were built at the same time, probably by the same builder. Morris Brothers probably moved in soon after it was built, renting the space from McEwen. A ca. 1910 photo shows that by then, the Morris Brothers occupied this and the two storefronts to its south. This space had a separate sign that read "Morris Brothers Furniture and Carpets." (200 Years pp. 2-3.) H.B. Ledbetter is listed as a lawyer in the 1879-1880 and 1889-1890 Gazetteers.

Sanborn Notes:

1900 Rackets - part of new 3 part building group with WHSE out back
1908 Furniture
1914 Furniture, iron ceiling, warehouse out back

* This property may be eligible as a contributing building within the proposed Courthouse Square Historic District.

Storefront display window openings have been filled in newer 1/1 windows - the paneled bulkheads are intact, as are most of the other early storefront components. The front door and side light are early. The top of the facade has ceramic tile coping, which appears to be newer than the rest of the building. The north wall, which faces an empty lot, is faced with newer brick.

History and Significance
This appears to be one of the oldest commercial buildings in the downtown area. The 1880 Atlas Map shows that a building was here then, and this appears to be that structure, minus its early cornice, which is visible in a photo of this block taken between 1908 and 1914.
This was home to a general store in its early years. The 1879-80 Gazetteer has an entry for Williams and Crowder (Thomas Williams and John H. Crowder) general store, and the 1889-90 entry shows that Mrs. Mary Williams has a general store, presumably having taken over her husband's business at this location.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

This building includes 115-119 N. Jefferson. Sanborn maps indicate that it was moved to this location from the front of the lot around 1900. The open porch on the south side shelters entrances to what are now apartments; it has a new shed roof, which may be similar to the original. There are new garage doors off of Spring Street to the north. An early addition at Spring has brick walls and early garage door. The 2/2 windows on the building are early, those with 1/1 are newer.

- A.S. Davis pt Lot 73 $2550
- 1920 B.J. Robinson pt Lot 73 $170
- A.A. Davis pt Lot 73 $4260

History and Significance:
This was part of the J. D. Highley Livery Business, which was a large operation in the latter part of the 19th century. Sanborn maps show that the south part of this lot, which faces West Liberty, was home to the Livery operation in 1894, and a ca. 1890 photo shows the Highley had a large stable close to Liberty Street at that time. He also had a listing for a livery service in the 1889-90 and 1889-99 Gazetteers. He apparently moved his business to the back of this lot after selling the street frontage to A. S. Davis just after the turn of the century. Davis built the large commercial building now located at 101-111 West Liberty on that land soon after. Later Sanborns show that he continued to run a livery out of this building for another decade or so.

B.J. Robinson is listed as a physician in the 1898-99 Gazetteer.

Most windows have been covered/closed in with weatherboards, which is the only change of note to the exterior of this large frame building. The front porch has a shed roof and turned posts, which appear to be early. There are new double front doors and concrete steps on the front and a rear door reached via a concrete stoop. This is one of the largest historic frame buildings in the survey group.

History and Significance
Although this building is not shown on the 1880 atlas map, the owner had heard that it dates to the mid-1800s. It does appear to have been built by 1883, the first year that tax assessments were filed geographically, a construction date of ca. 1881 has therefore been set with the understanding that this could be a bit older. It is, in any event, one of the oldest intact frame buildings in the survey group.

It is also important for its association with the African-American community in Farmington from the 1890s to at least the middle part of the 20th century.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

This highly intact one part commercial block shares a front parapet wall with the two buildings to the east, 13 and 15 West Liberty. The parapet is faced with brick-patterned asphalt and topped with crown molding. The molding may be of pressed metal. The front doors appear to be newer. The storefronts have large display windows topped by 3-light transoms. There has been some transom infill or painting of glass. The porch is early; the support posts appear to be modern.

Thirteen is the middle building in this photo. Part of a group of 3 buildings (9, 13, 15 W. Liberty) all with similar facades. This building shares a front parapet wall with the buildings on either side, 9 and 15 West Liberty. The parapet is faced with brick-patterned asphalt and topped with simple crown molding. The molding may be of pressed metal. The storefront is highly intact; the door may be newer, all else is early or original. The facade may have been added to an older building; gabled roofs behind the parapet can be seen from the back.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

This building includes 101-107 W. Liberty and is attached to 111. Polychromatic touches include red and tan brick with dark red terra cotta and rock faced limestone accents. The brick piers between the storefronts are rounded with very narrow joints. (The piers and terra cotta are very similar to those on the facade of 12 West Columbia.) The early storefronts are in very good condition. An early corner entrance is now a window; the opening is intact. Some windows are newer as well. The posts for the front porch are early, not original; the porch roof is very early and probably original. There are large doorways and concrete floored porches and steps on the rear wall.

This section of the building is an extension of the building at 101 West Liberty; it has all the same type of architectural detailing. The elaborate brick cornice on both sections of the building is ornamented with a band of egg and dart molding of terra cotta. The facade is ornamented with square terra cotta accent tiles, which are similar to those found on other buildings in the survey group, including 12 W. Columbia and 114 E. Columbia. This section of the building is set off by two sets of wide brick piers that flank a large doorway. The arched top of the doorway contains a large art glass panel. The roof of the porch forms a balcony floor for the second story. Concrete caps on the piers at roofline may have been ornamented at one time.

This building includes 116-118 W. Liberty. A long narrow building with a small Mission style shaped parapet is set above the corner entrance on the northwest, and a corbeled brick cornice runs along both of the street elevations. All three of the storefront units on the building have newer materials in early openings. There are three large openings on the long side wall; one with a modern garage door, one with solid infill, and one that is partly infilled with a pair of modern entry doors. The opening with the entry doors has a segmental arched top, as do two smaller windows on the north wall. The windows in those openings are modern.

History and Significance

A 1925 publication noted that "The Farmington Motor Company, located on West Liberty Street...occupies a brick building 50 by 150 feet, also a new brick and stone building just across the street from their original quarters." W.L. Gardner and R.L. Merseal headed the company. (Homeseeker, p. 2.) Another source includes a photo of the building across the street (119), with a note that it was the Farmington Motor Company in 1951. (Darnell, Vol III, p. 148.) This is most likely the surviving part of the "original quarters" mentioned in the 1925 publication.

Sanborn Notes:
1908 different building used for Hay and Grain store
1914 same building converted to garage; auto accessories on square to east, machine shop in rear
1927 vacant at west end, appears to have been brand new. Repair room at east end of this and connected to 2-story building on square, since lost. Attached to building to east of this, since lost; that 2 story building held "Ofc and Display." Auto storage for 10 cars in this one, also "Auto Storage" building to south of this.
1952 "Auto Sales and Service" with most of back lots on the block for "Used Auto Sales".

The flat sign board in the parapet of this large stone building is early or original; the current sign is painted on the smooth sign base in the wall. There are concrete sills on the windows, and a high concrete base to foundation. Concrete is also used for the cap on the battlemented parapet. The storefront windows are new units placed in the original openings, as are several of the side windows. Some of the early metal casement window remain on the back of the building. A side doorway near the back has the address of 106 N. Franklin St.

History and Significance
A 1925 publication noted that "The Farmington Motor Company, located on West Liberty Street...occupies a brick building 50 by 150 feet, also a new brick and stone building just across the street from their original quarters." W.L. Gardner and R.L. Merseal headed the company. (Homeseeker, p. 2.) Another source includes a photo of this building with a note that it was the Farmington Motor Company in 1951. (Darnell, Vol III, p. 148.) The company's merchant license record for 1926 noted an inventory of $1000.

This is most likely the "new brick and stone building" mentioned above, while the long brick building at 116 W. Liberty was part of the "original quarters."

Notes:

Capacity 40 cars, steel truss roof

This ca. 1951 restaurant was probably a roadside food stand when new. Most of the materials on the facade now appear to date to the 1960s or 70s. The early corner entrance is sheltered by an overhang of the low hipped roof. There is a shed roofed addition to the rear of the building.

C. S. Fitz was the owner of Fitz Chevrolet Company in 1939; this may have been part of that operation. He also owned auto-related buildings in the 100 block of North Washington Street.

Fitz was described in the 1939 account as "one of the most alert and progressive men that Farmington has ever had." That description also noted that he bought the business in 1936, and that by 1939 it included "a modern service department with factory-trained mechanics of the highest ability." History and Significance

This is one of several service stations to have been built on the busier streets in the downtown area after automobiles became popular in the 1920s. The basic layout of the office and service bays is still apparent.

The service station was built by John Ball, for Cities Service Oil Co. and later run by Jim Newman. Clifford Brewster bought the business in 1936, and he ran it with his brother, Edgar Brewster. A photo of the brothers in front of the station around 1940 shows that there was only one gabled service bay at that time. Clifford Brewster's next business venture involved buying property just down the road and building the large stone garage now located at 201 E. Liberty. (200 Years, p. 145.)

History and Significance

Although greatly altered from its historic appearance, this building was recorded to recognize its long association with commerce in Farmington. It has housed a hardware store for over a century. The building was built to house the hardware business of Emma Boswell, and her brother, Edward Helber, and it remained in their family until purchased by James and Delores Plummer in 1974. The business is now owned by their son, Scott Plummer. ("200 years, p. 105.)

Emma Boswell is listed as the owner of a hardware store in the 1889-1898 Gazetteer.

This appears to have started out as a small gas station with a covered front drive. The front drive area has since been enclosed with frame walls. The painted stone walls are probably of granite -- they are made of squared blocks with raised mortar joints. The windows in the upper gable end are early, most others are modern.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations
This was a feed warehouse in 1927, and may have been a feed mill at some point. It is a long one story building with a tall two story section near the back. There is an open porch with a frame roof on the south side of the two story section and a recessed porch on the east side of the same section. The walls of the recessed porch have some newer siding. There are modern garage doors on the west wall near the back.

Original form and patterns of fenestration are intact, as are early or original front door and windows. This large house has a deep plan. Four panel front door. Chamfered posts on porch, which appear to be early. Asbestos siding is biggest change, and that is more than fifty years old.

Gable roof over original flat one is the most notable alteration. The office section has a curved corner, and the display windows all appear to be original. There are three large service bays, also early or original. The stonework on the most visible walls is more formal than that on the east and north walls. The walls in public view have roughly squared block with raised mortar joints, while those less visible have irregular stones set in a much more random pattern. A smooth granite stone over the office door reads “1946” the walls are of sandstone.

History and Significance

This is one of the largest commercial garages of stone in the survey area today. It has served almost continually in its original capacity since being constructed in 1946. Clifford Brewster, who built the garage with John Schaeffer, worked for Harvey D. Roberts in a service station on North Washington when a young man, and in 1936 went into business with his brother Edgar Brewster. They owned the gas station at 32 E. Liberty from 1936 to around 1946. Brewster's biography in a local history notes that even though the highway bypass to Farmington was being built at the same time as this building, "he knew his customers were loyal and knew he could make a go of it." (200 Years" p. 145.) He was right; he stayed in service there until his retirement in 1968.

History and Significance
This was probably built by W. H. Pirkey sometime between 1927, when the lot was mapped for the Sanborn, and 1930, when the valuation increased.
It appears to be slightly older than the building on E.

The flat facade hides two smaller side gabled buildings. The side gabled buildings were shown on the 1952 Sanborn; the facade appears to have been added not long afterward. construction date is based upon specific source(s).

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

The large enclosed front porch probably dates to the last half of the 20th century. The main block of the house has a central chimney and a low rear ell, which is probably original. Asbestos siding is probably more than fifty years old, some narrow weatherboards are visible where the asbestos is coming off. The building is vacant.

Tall, narrow house with side gable roof. The high quality of the foundation, which is of carefully squares blocks of stone, indicates a relatively early construction date. The front door is newer; the opening is original. There is an early or original one story rear ell. The asbestos siding does not cover door and window trim—several windows are modern, a few early examples remain.

- 1950 Harvey D. Roberts N & E pt Lot 2 $120

History and Significance

A sign on the front of this building says "Since 1952"; it has been assumed that this is the 1952 location. It would have to have been built late in 1952, as it does not show up on the 1952 version of the Sanborn.

Roberts was also owner of 119 N. Washington and 125 N. Washington at one time or another. The following account is excerpted from a profile of the business, which appeared in a 1925 promotional publication for Farmington.

"H.D. Roberts Service Stations makes a speciality of the well-known and popular Red Crown gasoline and Polarine motor oils. Mr. Roberts is a gentleman of courteous bearing, untiring energy and fine business ability and has the entire confidence of the community in which he is operating.

In addition to selling gasoline, oils and greases, he also carries a line of tires, tubes and accessories. He is also one of the owners of the Roberts' Bros. Barber Shop, located on East Columbia Street".

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

One of the more unusual and intact early outbuildings in the survey area, and the only one built of stone. The center section has thick stone walls with small square window openings, and the side sections are of frame. The tin covered gable roof is original. The alley elevation is similar to that shown above; it has large wooden doors on the east side and a large wooden sliding door in the center section. A large rectangular opening in the gable end may have been for access to a hay loft.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

This is not on the 1952 Sanborn, but appears to have been built around that time. It has seen few changes of note. The facade has narrow red bricks and an aluminum frame storefront, which do not appear to have ever been altered. The bricks are fingered into the concrete block side wall. It is deeper that the buildings south of it and has a doorway in the back wall.

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

This building includes 119-123 N. Washington. It is part of a row of buildings on Washington, which appear to have been remodeled about the same time, ca. 1980-90s. It is a wide business block with a newer brick facade. Most windows are also newer. The back wall has double second floor windows, like those on the facade, and two entrances. That wall is stuccoed.

History and Significance
Sanborn Notes:
Not shown on the 1952 Sanborn; appears to have been built around the 1950s, possibly by Harvey D. Roberts

Roberts was also owner of 119 N. Washington and 1 W. Spring Street at one time or another. The following account is excerpted from a profile of the business which appeared in a 1925 promotional publication for Farmington.
"H.D. Roberts Service Stations makes a specialty of the well-known and popular Red Crown gasoline and Polarine motor oils. Mr. Roberts is a gentleman of courteous bearing, untiring energy and fine business ability and has the entire confidence of the community in which he is operating. In addition to selling gasoline, oils and greases, he also carries a line of tires, tubes and accessories. He is also one of the owners of the Roberts' Bros. Barber Shop, located on East Columbia Street".

The theater lost its facade in a fire in the mid-20th century, but most of the original building remains. This is just the back section of the theater, with what was a side door on Washington serving as the entrance. That doorway has two window openings next to it. Both are filled and several of the door and window openings at the back are also filled with plywood. All openings themselves are intact. There are large openings at the corners of the back of the building, which are screened.

<td>This was probably built for Consolidated Oil shortly after they purchased the property, between 1930 and 1940. It is one of a large number of auto-related buildings to have been erected in that time period. The increase in value in the 1950 tax record probably reflects the construction of the building at 4 East Harrison, which shares this lot.</td>

Describe major features; identify and date changes and alterations

IOOF 48 and Rebekah 407 are listed on the sign on the front of the building. Front parapet stripped with ceramic tiles. Front display window openings have been mostly bricked in and now have smaller glass block windows with concrete sills. A large garage door opening on the south side wall has also been bricked in, as have several side windows. The Sanborn map for 1952 notes that this has steel trusses and a concrete block structural system.

Description of Environment and Outbuildings
