43 History and Significance Henry Hoch purchased 40 acres along Sugar Creek from the U.S. Government in 1837. He built a dog-trot log cabin with the space between the two end rooms for a horse and a cow. A year or two later a barn was built, and the middle room of the log cabin was finished as a kitchen. The Hoch family quarried limestone on their property for many of the foundations of the early homes in Kirkwood. rubble to the second story and unfired brick above that. On the east is a one-story, one-room addition with a gable roof; the gable faces east. This addition has two bays of double windows and a tiny window in its gable. The second story of the main part of the house has two bays on its east side, above this addition. Facing south on this addition a door and a window are recessed under the roof, which makes a small verandah.

On the west side, two additions have been made; a one-story, one-bay addition on the south, with a shed roof that extends out beyond the addition and is supported by square posts to make another verandah. The verandah shelters a west-facing door. Above this porch a small room with a shed roof has been added. It has one bay facing north, south, and two west. On the north third of the west side of the house a one-story, one-room projection has been added with a gable roof; its gable faces west. It has one bay facing south and one north; the side facing west is blank.

South of the house is a two-story, log barn with a gable roof. Two doors and two windows face the house to the north, while two small windows face south.

The property includes 11.38 acres running up the side of a steep hill. It is all heavily wooded and the yard surrounding the house and outbuildings is very overgrown. A large flagstone terrace is on the south side of the house, and a stone well is at the southwest corner of the house.

The house is a very irregular shape with one or two gables, emphasized by broad returns, facing each side. The front of the house has one bay with a gable and a one story bay window on the west. In the center of the front is a 3-story, square tower with a hip roof, pairs of arched windows on the third floor on each side, a regular 2-over-2 double hung window on the second floor, and the front door recessed into the first floor. On the east side of the front are two bays with a narrow, one-story, front porch supported by square, corniced, posts in front of them. These bays on the first floor contain glass doors onto the porch with transoms over them.

In the center of the west side of the house is a one-story bay window with a gable with broad returns over the second story. Behind this gable there is a lower two-story section with a hip roof that fills in an L angle on the back of the house. The back of the house has two gables with broad returns, facing off from the higher roof. There is a one-story L shaped addition with a cross gable roof on the back of the house that is the kitchen and a storage room.

"Kirkwood Argus" that was devoted to Kirkwood news. The Black family enlarged the house.

The Ethan Allen Taussigs lived in the house from 1904 to 1924. Mr. Taussig had been a primo busso with the San Carlo Opera Company in London. He attended the Royal Academy where he met his prima donna wife who also sang with the San Carlos. The Taussigs had one son when they moved to Kirkwood and with the arrival of two more children they enlarged the house at the rear by adding an ups tairs and a downstairs room. In 1924, the Phil Rau family bought the house from the Taussigs. Mr. Rau, orphaned at age nine and forced to leave school in the fourth grade, educated himself and became a successful dry-goods merchant. His avocation was etymology. He wrote two books on the subject, one of which was published by Princeton University. The residence now serves as the History House of the Kirwood Historical Society.

floor, and a one-story bay window with a short truncated hip roof comes out of the front of this bay. The west part of the front is recessed from the east part. It contains 3 bays and has a one-story veranda across it with a flat roof surrounded by a wrought iron railing. The veranda roof is supported by 3 pairs of square wooden posts with cornices on top. The double front door is in the west bay of this east part of the house. The other two windows on the first floor, like many of the windows on the first floor, have panelled doors under them so that they could be opened from the floor to the ceiling in summer.

The west side of the house has a veranda protecting the first two bays (a window and a French door) with a glassed-in sleeping porch above it. There are three bays going back and beyond that is a two-story section behind with two bays and a much lower roof with a back gable. This was the old kitchen with servants quarters above it.

The back of the house is a crotch of the T with three bays (2 windows and a door) on the east part, and the lower kitchen section with 2 bays (a door and a window) sticking out on the west. There is a one-story, L-shaped, veranda in this crotch of the T. On the second floor, in the crotch of the T, two small bathrooms have been built over the veranda.

On the east side of the house, two stories of glassed-in sun rooms have been added with a flat roof. There is a small segmental arched window in the gable of the main house above the sun rooms.

42 Further Description of Important Features Mudd's Grove is a large, red brick, Greek Revival house with a cross gable copper roof. The soft, unfired bricks are painted red and they rise into double chimneys with a parapet between on either end of the house. The windows are all double hung, 6 over 6, with timber sills and lintels painted to look like stone, and functional shutters. A one-story porch wraps around the front of the house. It has a hip roof supported by ten square posts with cornices. The posts have wooden lattice work between them.		26. Local Contact Person or Organization
43 History and Significance John Hoffman bought the block the house is on and the one west of it in 1859 from the Kirkwood Association (a holding company for the founding of the town). He built the house and sold both blocks to Henry T. Mudd in 1866. The Mudds owned over 100 acres adjoining this at that time. Henry Mudd was the county auditor and a Trustee of the City of Kirkwood. He served in the state legislature and helped frame the Missouri Constitution of 1875. He was a curator of the University of Missouri and President of the State		27. 44 Description of Environment and Outbuildings The house sits on a wooded corner lot. A brown shingle, 1 story carriage house with a hip roof is at the entrance to the driveway on Harrison. There is a brown shingle, one story, three car garage with a hip roof in the northwest corner of the lot.		37. Condition Interior excellent Exterior excellent

except where the broad wooden stairs lead up to the front door in the center of the house. A pedimented portico projects from the center bay on the second floor. The pediment is supported by two square posts with wooden lattice work between them creating a small balcony in front of the door in the center bay of the second floor. An entablature with dentils runs under the eaves of the front porch and front roof and portico.

A two-and-a-half-story addition projects from the west half of the back of the house, three bays deep, with a flounder-type roof. Two stories of sunporches with a shed roof have been added across the back of the main part of the house. A small, gable dormer is in the middle of the back.

Horticultural Society.

In 1882, Henry and Sarah Mudd sold their home to Peter Behr. In 1889 the Behrs sold the house to George D. Dana and his wife, Virginia. The Danas did much remodeling and built the gate lodge and later the three car garage. George Dana was the founder of the Charter Oak Stove Company and a Trustee of the Town of Kirkwood and later an alderman.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Mahan, who owned the house in the 1920's made the house into a two family dwelling and rented out the east half.

In 1941, Mr. and Mrs. Francis X. Muckerman purchased the house and converted it back to a single family home. They modernized the house further and installed an elevator.

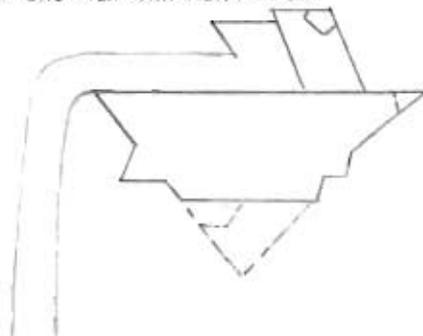

William Bodley Lane, a restoration architect, purchased Mudd's Grove in 1955, and has done much restoration work on it.

single-paned clerestory windows and a stained glass door at the south end. A flat carport roof extends east into the hill at the south end of the house. It is supported by triangular brick post in the center and by a pentagonal brick room next to the hill. A brick wall with an acute angle forms a parking area against the hill.

The little carport room has 3 small windows on its south side. The house has a sharp angle, like the prow of a boat, where the ground drops away to the south and west. The east side of the prow has a large three-paneled window. The southern window panel makes a glass corner connecting with three floor-length panels of glass facing south, one of which is stained glass. The left two of these are doors opening onto a tiny triangular porch (the prow).

The west side of the house has the cut-out prow on the south, a blank brick wall with a large triangular brick chimney above it, a short section protruding with two small windows meeting with a glass corner, a large section extending out the width of three large window panels has eight floor to ceiling stained glass window panels opening onto a large triangular patio. The patio is built at the level of the house with a low brick wall around it so that from the ground on the outside, on the west side, the wall is 7 or 8 ft. tall.

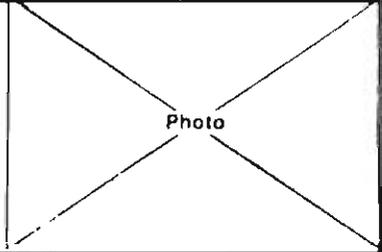

On the west end of the north side of the house there is a trapezium-shaped enclosure with a high wall, probably a private patio. From the center of the north side of the house a sharp triangle extends out about five feet. The triangle has a window wrapping around the top of it with a glass corner. Behind the tall private patio wall stained glass panels appear to go to the floor. On the eastern wall of the north side there is a flat brick wall with 3 small clerestory windows.

After that the Frisco Railroad rented the station to Mr. and Mrs. York for $1 per year. The Yorks were from Germany and had one son. Mrs. York, Gussie, planted bowers of flowers from the station to the tracks. There were acres of iris, tulips and daffodils; corn flowers, lilacs and snowballs were everywhere and roses were trained over archways. 42. Further Description of Important Features		This house is like a German hunting lodge perched on a bluff overlooking the Meramec River. It has an atrium inside in the middle with a glass skylight. It is low, one story, with a sprawling low hip roof which changes pitches and has several low gable dormers for ventilation. The house has a squared rubble foundation up to about two feet above the ground level with a stone water table all the way around the house. Above the foundation the walls are half timbered, with rough stucco. The windows are all		5. Other Name(s) Edwin Lemp House
43 History and Significance		Cragwold was built for Edwin A. Lemp (1880-1970) the grandson of John Adam Lemp (d. 1862) the founder of the Lemp Brewing Co. of St. Louis. The Lemp Brewing Company was the largest brewing company in St. Louis at the turn of the century, brewing 125,000 bottles of beer a day. The brewery covered 16 city blocks. The Lemp family was very colorful: Lillian Handlan Lemp, for example, was known as the Lavender Lady because she wore only lavender and had each of her horses harnessed and carriages upholstered in lavender.
44 Description of Environment and Outbuildings		This house is far back from a public road with warnings against trespassing. The long private driveway passes several houses and then goes through an iron gate at the entrance. There is a large red barn with many horses on the east of the driveway and a lighted tennis court on the west of the driveway. The drive then circles past double hung, nine over twelve.

The front of the house faces north. On its east end are two bays recessed one bay deep, forming a small patio. The shed roof of this patio is glass and is supported by fancy wrought iron posts. A giant stuffed deer head hangs between the windows. In the main section of the front of the house there are two bays, the glass double front door with double hung sidelights, then three bays of windows with a broad stone chimney running up the wall between the two west windows, and finally a heavy, low, side door. The hip roof extends out over a porte-cochere in front of the front door. It is supported by four massive stone posts, the two posts furthest from the house have a low stone wall between them, covered with ivy, with the bust of a woman on the wall and some large sea shells.

The east and west sides of the house, are long containing doors at either end and French doors in the middle. Various horns and antlers are hung on the timbers and over the doors on both sides. As the ground drops away to the back, there is a red tile terrace going around the house. It is supported by a massive, battered, stone wall that surrounds the terrace, 3 ft. high.

At the back of the house there are eight bays. The roof extends out over the center three bays to the stone wall. It is supported by massive stone posts and screened in to make a porch. At each corner of the stone wall around the terrace are wrought iron bird baths and bronze statues of herons and roosters.

On the east corner of the back of the house, a square stone tower, one bay on each side rises two stories. It has a flat roof and wooden balconies on top, and a flag pole goes up on the south east edge.

When Edwin retired from the brewery in his thirties and moved to Cragwold with its 140 acres on the bluffs overlooking the Meramec, he established a menagerie. Three German shepherds were his constant companions, many exotic birds were loose in the atrium, a large aquarium was located beside his quarters, and a pride of lions and a herd of bison roamed the woods around the house.

Edwin was a well-known gourmet, planning menus for dinner parties weeks in advance with his German cook. He often imported rare foods including sauces from New York or pickles from Milwaukee. Some of his close friends were George Vierheller, head of the St. Louis Zoo; Thomas Dooley, father of the noted doctor; Eddie Duchin and Helen Traubel. Edwin's father, two of his brothers, and one of his sisters committed suicide. Perhaps because of this, Edwin was reluctant to be alone. He was a substantial benefactor

42. History and Significance This house was probably built for Spencer Smith in the 1850's. He owned this land in 1853 when the original town of Kirkwood was laid out. The St. Louis city directories indicate that he ran a private seminary for girls on North 6th Street in the city in the 1850's. He must have commuted from Kirkwood to the school during the late 1850's because he was elected one of the first vestrymen of Grace Episcopal Church in 1859.		Photo by cornices and then fancy brackets. Brackets support the eaves of the roof. The windows are double-hung, 4-over-4, surrounded by thick wooden frames with rounded corners. The center section of the west side of the house contains one large bay, which on the first floor has a flat-roofed bay window. The projection on the east side contains 2 bays. Three of the arms of the cross are only one bay deep- but the north one is three bays deep on each side and has 3 bays across its north end. This projection appears to be newer than the rest of the house because the windows are 6-over-6 and their glass is not as wavy. A side door in the center of the east side of this projection has a small hexagonal porch in front of it, with a flat roof supported by fancy, turned posts. The posts are connected by a railing that is supported by fancy turned spindles.
43. Description of Environment and Outbuildings The house sits on the northeast part of a large wooded corner lot. A gravel driveway runs past the front of the house on the south side of the lot. A small board-and-batten on the southeast corner of the lot has been converted to a 2-car garage.

In 1866, the city directory lists Spencer Smith as the professor of Natural Sciences at the City University of St. Louis. At the time of his death in 1870, he was one of the oldest and most active members of the St. Louis Academy of Science.

In 1902, this house was bought by Judge William Winchester Keysor, his wife Jennie, and their two sons. Judge Keysor had just become a professor at the Washington University Law School. Mrs. Keysor was a pioneer in adult education. She lectured to the Kirkwood High School PTA and to the Shakespeare Tercentenary Society of St. Louis. She was the author of two sets of books for children, Great Artists and Sketches of American Authors. She also gave classes in her home to housewives on poetry, art and literature. Judge Keysor died in 1922 and Mrs. Keysor died in 1945.

The Yeats children Joseph, Thomas, William and Ellen inherited the land in 1852 and later sold their holdings to Dr. John L. Matthews in 1864. Samuel J. and Mary D. 44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings		The house sits on a hill, at a curve in the road, almost like a peninsula. The landscaping is simple; just a few old trees and a large tidy sloping lawn.

across. Its roof is slightly lower than that of the top of the T. The stones in this section of the house are of the same kind of limestone as in the first section, but are cut in larger blocks. The windows in this section are double-hung, six-over-six, with functional shutters, but have larger stone sills and the lintels are not curved. There is a stone chimney piercing the roof on the south end of the leg.

In the west angle of the T a small, one-story, frame vestibule with a flat roof has been added. It has the front door on the west and a window on the south. A one-story screened porch with a flat roof supported by square posts projects on the west.

On the eastern side of the north of the house a long, narrow, 1½-story projection has been added. Its roof line is lower than that of the rest of the house and its gable faces north. On the west side of this projection one bay is made of the large limestone blocks and four bays are board and batten, painted white. The windows are irregular. The second story window in the stone bay is a tiny casement window. In the board and batten part the windows are staggered, the two windows on the first floor are double-hung, six-over-six, the first window on the second floor is double-hung, four-over-four, and the second window on the second floor is a large casement window. The gable end that faces north contains one bay of large casement windows.

On the east side the leg of the T has been filled in with a concrete addition, three bays long. The bay that is in the angle of the T is two stories with casement windows facing east, and on the first floor a door faces south. The next two bays to the south are open on the bottom, sheltering the door and the two bays of the original stone house. The two second story bays are supported by large concrete posts which are a visible detail on the side of the house to the roofline, like the piers of a skyscraper.

Starting from the top of the T, which is in the center of this side, is the long low addition. On this side the addition is two bays in large stone blocks with a stone chimney running up the outside wall between the windows, and two bays in board and batten to the north. The farthest north bay has one story, frame, bay window with a hip roof.

The prominent features of this building are; its low side gables; the pediments which pierce the house and porch rooflines; its varied siding material; and its facade veranda. In addition to its wood horizontal lap-siding this house also has a frieze of combination straight wood shingles and fish-scale wood shingles between the first and second level windows. Continuous wood stringcourses bound the shingle frieze. Fish-scale shingles also exist in the pediments. The pediments contain boxed cornices, and the facade roofline pediment contains a wood louvered ventilation opening. Before a one story frame addition was added to the west, the facade veranda and entry were off-center toward west. The addition centralizes them. The entry contains a wood raised-panel door with a single light in the upper half. The veranda has a shed roof which rests on wood columns with doric capitals; its floor and stairs are poured concrete. All facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped. The first level windows have wood sills, and the second level windows rest on the wood stringcourse of the wood shingle frieze. The two first level facade windows toward the east and the two second level facade windows toward the west have wood shutters. The one story addition to the west of the facade contains a hooded entry with a wood single-leaf door. There is a two story addition at the rear of the building and a one story addition which connects the house with the frame garage (now being built).

43 History and Significance Daniel Sidney Brown had this house built in 1880 and named it Brownhurst. He had been born in St. Louis in 1854, the same year that his father founded the Pioneer Cooperage Co. Daniel ran the St. Louis branch of this national firm. He moved to Kirkwood to find clean air for his flowers, especially his orchid collection. Forty acres of his estate were devoted to flower gardens and greenhouses. dormers above the roof line. The back and north side of the house are covered with shingles on the first and second stories. Most of the windows are double hung, 20 over 1 with their frames painted white. The roof is a cross gable hip roof with gables facing the front and back on both ends of the house making an H shape. Five massive stone chimneys run up the sides of the house, 2 on the north, 1 on the east, one on the south and one on the back; they pierce the roof. There is a one story, circular stone bay window on the east end of the north side of the house with a stone balcony above it.

A large hip dormer containing 4 windows is in the center of the front, between the two gable ends. There are two hip dormers on the north side, the east one containing two windows and the west one containing one window. A large hip dormer is on the south side with the chimney going up the middle of it and a window on either side of the chimney. A large hip dormer containing 3 windows is in the center of the back.

On the back the north leg of the H shape projects 3 bays deep. The roof of this leg is a hip instead of a gable.

When a shortage of coal developed in 1918 due to World War I, Mr. Brown was afraid that his orchids would die from the cold, so he gave them to the Missouri Botanical Gardens. centrally located. The foundation is partially exposed. Most of the windows follow the original style of a double-hung two-over-two pattern and they have black shutters. Door occupies E bay of N front. Two of the 3 first story windows on the W side were replaced with a large bay window which extends about 5 feet from the side of the house. The frame of the N second story window on the E side has been filled with clapboard. The north first-story window on the E side is of the port-hole type. There are two small, adjacent south windows on the first story which are double-hung, six-over-four. The sleeping porch on the south face has five windows facing south and two windows on each side. On the first story of the S face, the W corner has a long, narrow window; another porthole-type window is in the middle bay, and the E bay contains a rear doorway. The front door is located in the recessed E bay of the N face. The door itself is believed to be original and is double-leafed with a semi-elliptical top and no embrasure. The rear door, set on the E bay of the S side, is single-leafed with 6 glass panels and a semi-elliptical top.

The few decorative details include evenly-spaced brackets under the projecting eaves of the roof of the main structure and the N porch, mounted on a plain frieze. There is also a bracketed hood over each of the original windows, with the exception of the 2 first story windows on the N front which are topped with wooden arches.

parcel of land on which to construct the first school house, Hoffman sold them his property at Clay and Jefferson Avenues in 1866. He also headed a committee to widen and pave Kirkwood Avenue.

Hoffman's daughter, Elizabeth, must have married Thomas H. Ward sometime after his arrival in Kirkwood in 1878. The 1886 deed which describes John Hoffman's transfer of the property to Thomas and Elizabeth Ward mentions the house and its furnishings.

Thomas Ward, son of Captain James Ward, president of the North Line Packet Company, one of the country's largest steamboat lines, became a business partner with his father in 1869 when Captain Ward sold his entire interest in his steamboat company and started a ship chandlery business. The Ward Chandlery Company proved to be quite successful until about the turn of the century and Thomas Ward retired soon afterward.

Both Thomas and Elizabeth Ward died about 1918 or 1919 and the property and house passed on to their two sons James and Harry. Harry Ward had always lived at the house with his parents and remained single. James and his wife, Fay, moved into the house with Harry after their parents died. In 1919, the Ward brothers sold their joint ownership of the house to James' wife, Fay Ward. James Ward died about 1921 and Fay

Ward moved to Dallas, Texas, selling the house to a widow named Mary G. E. Thomas.

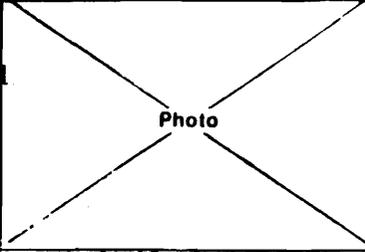

Mrs. Thomas lived in the house with her daughter, Mary E. Thomas, and her son, Abbot Thomas, throughout at least the early 1920's. Mrs. Thomas' daughter, Mary, married Percy Phillips about 1923-24. Part of the property was deeded to the Phillips in 1924 and the rest in 1928 by Mrs. Thomas. The house was divided into a two family unit sometime during the 1920's or 30's, and a stairway was placed outside the east side of the house leading to a second floor entrance. In 1943 the house was sold at a public auction to the Home Owners Loan Corporation of Washington D.C., which in turn sold it to Theodore Pauli. The house was sold in 1978 to George Hellmuth, who is Chairman of Board of Hellmuth, Obata and Kassabaum, Inc., architectural firm. Mr. Hellmuth has already begun work on restoring the house and having it designated as a historic landmark.

43 History and Significance The nucleus of the residence, a small brick house, was built by Charles Nicholas and Marie Louise Charlotte dePombiray who purchased the property from Ernst Meyer in 1850. Alexander Moore bought the 113 acres in 1867 and added to the house, making it a two-story building with porches up and downstairs. John Moore, son of Alexander Moore, inherited the property and named it Mooreland Stock Farm. He sold it to Mrs. John Lockett 44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings The House is surrounded by post-war ranch style houses. The yard is modest; large old trees growing on a patio just off of the galleries on the south side of the house. An herb garden is outside the kitchen door on the back.

bay under these gables and one bay on the south. Front door in the north bay. A 2-story front porch, is supported by 4 square, wooden posts with cornices on each floor, with a decorative railing and brackets on the second floor.

Behind the front section of the house, is a two story middle section, also made of brick. Its hip roof is lower than the front roof. This section is narrower than the front section, making an L on the south side. It contains one bay of windows on the north and two bays of windows on the south. All the windows in the two brick sections are double hung, 6 over 6, with functional shutters.

The back section of the house is frame and has two bays on each side and three bays across the back. The N bay on the back is a back door. This whole section is wider and projects on the north. This makes room for a bay of small windows facing the front on that north side of the house. The windows in the frame section of the house are double hung, 2 over 2, with functional shutters.

On the south side two galleries of open porches fill in the angle of the L and extend all the way to the back. They are supported by four massive, square, wooden posts on each floor with wooden railings between them. The porches have four bays with doors in the two middle bays on the first floor and a door in the east bay on the second floor. Also a door opens onto the first floor gallery from the front section of the house.

in 1915. In remodelling and modernizing the house, a tunnel was discovered in the cellar. It led south about a block to Dougherty Ferry Rd. According to legend, it was intended as a means of escape from Indians, although few Indians were seen in this area. The foundation of the house is of masonry with very thick walls and when installing furnace pipes, Mrs. Lockett's workmen deiscovered four or five empty caches located behind the walls. On January 17th 1934, fire broke out in the residence. The house was badly damaged and Mrs. Lockett ordered extensive remodelling and beautification. More rooms were added and the upper and lower galleries were broadened. In 1945, a developer bought the farm. Mrs. Lockett continued to live there as a renter until 1947

The front has three bays plus the tower on the southwest corner. The center bay contains the double board-and-batten front door protected by a one-story gabled stone projection. There is a small Gothic window in the main gable above the front door.

On either side of the church there are 4 bays of stained glass windows with buttresses in between. Near the rear are transept-like projections, north and south, one bay deep and one bay across with a lower gable roof. The north projection has a metal roof, the south projection has a slate roof like the main part of the church. A door faces the front on the south projection with a gable roof over it.

Since the Unitarians purchased the building in 1960 they have made extensive changes. They have added a semi-hexagonal all-glass window on the back to form an apse. Outside this window is a landscaped fenced-in courtyard. On the south side they have added a modern one-story brick and glass Sunday school building with a flat roof. In 1914, a fire caused considerable damage in the oldest section of the Church but it was restored as it had been.

In 1960 a new church was built at 514 E. Argonne, and this building was sold to the Eliot Unitarian Chapel. A low modern brick Sunday school was added to the south side of the church in 1962. It was designed by Smith and Entzeroth Architects.

42. Further Description of Important Features This small, white, frame, Victorian cottage has fine gingerbread on the front, probably a benefit of having been built for a builder. The original structure was a rectangle with a cross-gable roof, the main gables facing east and west with a chimney in the center of the peak of the roof, and a gable portico coming out of the center of the front of the house, facing north. The front of the house is three bays with a door with a transom in the center bay, under the portico. The portico is		Photo
43. History and Significance This house was built in the 1860's by E. W. Halsey. Mr. Halsey was a building contractor. He built the first public school in Kirkwood in 1869, and he built the Gill House at 419 E. Argonne. The Halsey family owned this house until Emma J. Halsey, a widow and Charles P. Halsey, a single man, sold it in 1903 to Edwin Rode. The Rode family had three children and owned the house until 1971. In 1971, the YMCA purchased this house 44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings The yard of this property has several large trees. There is quite a bit of trash in the backyard, and the east side and back yard are used for parking. This location is at the west edge of Kirkwood's eastern residential area and is bordered on the west by a bank parking lot. supported by square posts with large fancy brackets and gingerbread between them and between the posts and the houses on the sides. The pediment of the portico contains a circular window with decorative barge boards and a wood pendant at the peak. The two windows on the front of the house have functional shutters and are double-hung, two-over-two, as are most of the other first-floor windows.

The east side contains two bays. The second story under the eaves of the gable is board-and-batten and has two tall, narrow windows, double-hung one-over-one.

The west side would be similar to the east except for a one-story addition. The second story is board-and-batten with the two, tall, narrow windows; small square windows are on either side of the tall, narrow ones. The one story addition is L shaped and has a flat roof. Facing the north, front, recessed about four feet is one bay, then facing the west are two bays (these windows are tall, narrow windows, one-over-one), then facing the front is one bay, and finally at the foot of the L facing west is one bay.

On the back of the house, the south of this one-story addition forms one bay. A one-story, L-shaped addition with a shed roof has been added across the back of the original cottage. This addition is shed-like with many doors and windows. It appears to be for storage and unheated.

The main part of the house is a rectangle with a one story bay window with a hip roof on each side. There are five bays across the front with pedimented lintels over the windows. The front door is recessed		5. Other Name(s)
43. History and Significance		Built in 1878, the residence served as the home of John A. and Fannie McElroy family. Joseph B. Greensfelder purchased the house and moved to Kirkwood in the late 1890's when he began his study of law. Until 1906, he was a justice of the peace in Clayton and earned the reputation of being the "marrying justice". He helped found the Kirkwood Savings Bank and served as its first president.

43 History and Significance The track was completed and the first train pulled into Collins Station, at the site of the present station, in 1853. From there stage coach service was available to Manchester, Missouri. In 1855, the tracks went as far west as Jefferson City, and by 1861 they had reached Sedalia, MO. In 1863 a new frame station was built, and in 1893 the present stone building was constructed. In 1941 the interior was extensively remodeled, but a plan to "colonialize" the exterior was stopped by protests from Kirkwood civic groups. In 44.
